BREAKFAST ODDITIES

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fancy some fried Chinese food for breakfast?

Or, alternatively, a bottle of Coke, some chicken pizza and a chunk of steak . . . with a blob of chocolate ice cream to finish off.

Those are just some of the oddities British Columbia children eat for breakfast.

Ed Nelson (NDP — Burnaby-Seymour) conducted a survey in two schools in his riding to find out what children eat for breakfast.

Nelson found that socio-economic factors had little to do with the quality of breakfasts.

One school had a high population of lower income students, the other was in an upper income area. Basically, most children ate commercial cereals and milk for breakfast.

Some, however, said that during a period of one week they had eaten fried Chinese food, steak, chocolate ice cream and chicken pizza and cake.

The odd child ate nothing — or ate nothing at all except "a glass of water."

Eggs and bacon, waffles, fruit juice, flavored drinks and coffee were other popular meals.

Heaviest U.S. Raids Pound Cambodia

Times News Service

SAIGON — U.S. planes, including every available B-52 bomber in Southeast Asia, gave Communist forces in Cambodia their heavviest pounding of the war during the night as part of the U.S. campaign to force them into a ceasefire, reliable sources reported today.

The sources compared the bombing to the attacks on Hanoi and Haiphong last December that were aimed at forcing North Vietnam into a peace settlement.

But the Communists in Cambodia are widely dispersed and have none of the industrial concentrations vulnerable to air attack that the North Vietnamese had.

The sources said they were unable to say just how many strikes U.S. pilots flew or how many tons of bombs they dropped.

But they indicated about 120 B-52s were used in the attack, and that could mean a total of 3,600 tons of bombs dropped.

Military sources said some of the big bombers, along with F-111 fighter-bombers, supported Cambodian government troops advancing into the Kirirom plateau 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

The government troops are reported to have reached the plateau and found a deserted base camp of the Khmer Rouge.

But other government forces south of Phnom Penh continued to retreat and abandoned the garrison town of Chambak, 30 miles south of the capital.

In South Vietnam, the Saigon government continued to complain about the six-week-old Communist siege of the Tong Le Chan ranger camp 50 miles north of Saigon.

Meanwhile, President Nixon, winding up two days of talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu, appeared today to be backing away from a public military guarantee for South Vietnam despite his readiness to act against any new invasion by the North.

His remarks indicated he might decide to give a private commitment to President Thieu and publicly rest on his recent warnings of reprisals if Hanoi blatantly violates the ceasefire.

In Washington U.S. Defence Secretary Elliot Richardson repeated today if North Vietnam flagrantly violates the Indochina ceasefire, the United States might have to resume bombing in support of South Vietnamese troops.

Nixon needs no new authority from congress for such action, he added.

Richardson said he was confident South Vietnam would be able to provide for its own security in the near future, even if North Vietnam engages in a massive invasion.

But he said if violations of the truce continue and "if it were critical to the survival of South Vietnam," the United States might be forced into "the re-introduction of U.S. forces."

Meat Sales Off

Times News Services

Consumers appear to be biting into the week-long meat boycott with determination, throwing off meat sales by as much as 80 per cent in scores of supermarkets in the United States and in some parts of Canada and slicing some prices 29 cents a pound.

Mrs. Margaret Addis, leading the boycott in Victoria, said today she believes her group's plea is gaining support.

She increased to 2,000, her estimate of the number of area consumers who signed a petition supporting the boycott.

Consumer groups are urging that cottage cheese, fish, chicken and eggs be substituted for beef and fish retailers say the boycott is affecting sales.

Mrs. Janet Tubman, of Fisherman's Market on the Island Highway, reports sales went "way up" on the weekend, Monday and this morning.

"I've asked a few women, about 10 or so, if it's because of the meat boycott and they say yes," she said.

BUYING FISH

"They've been buying enough fish to last the whole week."

"It's like my meat had some disease; nobody'll even touch it," complained a meat manager in the New York City area, where a check of supermarkets showed the boycott to be about 80 per cent effective on the first shopping day Monday

Siouxland Beef Processors closed their plants temporarily in Fargo, N.D., Omaha, Neb., and Sioux City, Iowa. They said they wanted to determine what effect the boycott would have.

Standard Beef Inc. of Detroit, which normally processes 150 to 200 cattle a day, was handling only 100 to 125. Meat packers across Michigan reported orders down 25 per cent.

About 500 butchers were laid off by Cincinnati packing houses. In Cleveland, about 200 meat cutters were out of work Monday.

In Washington, Safeway Stores laid off 50 of its 300 meat cutters. Giant Food stores laid off part-time meat cutters and transferred a number of regular butchers to other departments of the supermarket.

About price declines, Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, minimized the impact.

"I don't think the boycott activity of these activities amounts to a mammary gland on a mudworm," Adamy said. Meat demand started dropping six weeks ago, he said, as consumers began resisting higher prices.

Operation Nasty Deal Nasty Deal for Hans

Hans Gajowski was quietly doing his job Monday afternoon when he was arrested and held at gunpoint for nearly two hours by uniformed Canadian military personnel.

He and his partner Joe Macerias ran afoul of an exercise named Nasty Deal, designed to train servicemen to combat civil strife.

Gajowski and Macerias work for Chew Excavating Ltd. and were doing a routine check of a pumping station at CFB Esquimalt. They had been admitted to the base without passes since their work truck was all the identification they needed.

When they put down their tools for a coffee break at 2 p.m. and returned to their truck, they were approached by "six or eight people fully dressed in military uniform."

At first the military men said it was "okay" that the workmen didn't have any identification passes.

"But when we finished our break and came out (of the truck), a big man with a gun jumped out," Gajowski said. "He said stop and put your hands in the air."

The two workmen were marched at gunpoint up to a large training hall where they were forced to stand with their hands against the wall and told not to move or talk.

"The rifles were always pointed at us," Gajowski said.

"And one man said 'watch out for weapons' — we both heard him."

Gajowski said they had to stand against the wall for about 15 minutes.

"I don't know what they were doing. I told them I wanted to talk to a navy MP (military policeman) who would know who we were," Gajowski said, "but they wouldn't let us."

The two workmen were then marched, again at gunpoint and surrounded by the uniformed guards, to the main gate where the commissionaire told them the MPs were at another gate.

The march then continued down to the other gate where the two men were held outside a building.

"The men went inside and talked to the MP while we waited," Gajowski said. "Then they took off and we were allowed to see the MP and he phoned Chew Excavating."

The company confirmed who the men were and the MP issued them each a special pass and allowed them to leave.

John Heine is a young cartoonist who is quickly gaining recognition for the individuality of his work. Two of his distinctive drawings, under the name "Maya", are in the Times on Page Five today and will be seen frequently in the future.

Maya is the Sanskrit word for illusion. Heine says he chose it because "it leaves my cartoon panel open for an infinity of ideas and keeps it from being clouded."

Amplifying in his own way on what he is trying to do, Heine sets his goal as, "to break through the cartoon bubble that has restricted thoughts for many years and expand it into a whole new bubble."

B.C. Gets Can-Cel For Debts

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government announced Monday it has established itself in the pulp industry, through acquisition of controlling interest, in the operations of Columbia Cellulose Ltd., a major pulp-producing concern in the province.

The agreement was made public in the legislature by Resources Minister Bob Williams.

Seventy nine per cent of the assets of Canadian Cellulose — the principal operating subsidiary of Colcel — will go to the province in exchange for the province guaranteeing long-term debts amounting to about $70.5 million which are owed by Canadian Cellulose to bondholders, banks and investors.

The agreement was concluded primarily between the provincial government and the Celanese Corporation, the American parent firm of Columbia Cellulose.

As part of the agreement, a debt of $73 million, which was owed by Canadian Cellulose to the Celanese Corporation, will be written off.

Williams said the release of the debt to the parent company will put Canadian Cellulose in a better economic position.

The government's interest in Canadian Cellulose will be managed by a proposed new crown corporation to be called British Columbia Cellulose Limited.

Legislation creating the corporation and authorizing the government to enter into the agreement will be passed by the legislature this spring, Williams said.

The legislation has not yet been introduced.

Columbia Cellulose is reported to have lost about $100 million in its B.C. operations since 1966.

The parent company — Celanese — has been interested in selling out since 1968.

As part of the agreement, the government will assume control through its 79 per cent interest in all the pulp-producing operations of Columbia Cellulose in B.C.

These include the profitable operations located in the Castlegar area, known as Celgar.

It had been the intention of Columbia Cellulose to sell its Celgar operations to the giant American Weyerhaeuser Corporation last year. But the sale was blocked by Williams

BANKS SPECULATED DURING $ CRISIS

WASHINGTON (WP) — American commercial banks were "significant participants" in the "sizeable outflows of funds from the U.S." during the intense speculation on the dollar which led to its Feb. 12 devaluation, U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew Brimmer said Monday.

Brimmer, in a speech to the Bankers' Association for Foreign Trade in Boca Raton, Fla., said that there is not enough detailed information to "appraise the part they played," but said available data persuades "one that their participation was by no means trivial."

Intense speculation against the dollar in late January and early February led to a 10 per cent dollar devaluation on Feb. 12. Despite the devaluation, speculation continued and by last month most of the major world economic powers floated their currencies.

Brimmer, whose text was released here, said that U.S. banks "contributed on balance some $2.5 billion to the volume of funds which moved abroad in connection with the exchange rate speculation earlier this year."

Snow, Thunder Wallop South

Times News Services

Heavy snows and severe thunderstorms walloped much of the southwestern United States today from Arizona to Texas and north into Colorado.

Denver was hit by two inches of snow from a storm system that had already dumped up to 17 inches of snow on the Albuquerque, N.M., area. Heavy snow warnings remained in effect for the mountains of New Mexico and extreme southeastern Colorado.

Efforts to drop hay to stranded cattle in Colorado from helicopters were temporarily abandoned. A spokesman for the Colorado agriculture department estimated that 15,000 calves may be lost in this severe weather.

In Europe trees flew through the air, homes collapsed, mudslides cut communications in Sicily and at least nine people have died on the continent victims of the weather.

Gale force winds hit the south of England. A tree in Boesensell, West Germany, was uprooted by a storm and tossed into a passing commuter train.

A storm raged through The Netherlands, carrying winds of 70 miles an hour. One man was killed when a wall toppled over on him. Dozens of people were reported injured when their cars were blown off the road.

A radio station operating from a ship off the Dutch coast, Radio Veronica, broke its moorings in the storm and washed ashore. The crew escaped in a lifeboat.

In the Soviet Union, the Tass news agency reported an earthquake in central Asia rocked the town of Kulyab. The agency said there was no damage.

Second U.K. Mail Bombing

LONDON (Reuter) — A mail bomb exploded in a London post office today, the second such blast in four days in the city.

One man was taken to a hospital suffering from shock after the blast in a sorting office in West London.

A mail bomb damaged a room at a sorting office in Kilburn in North London last Saturday.

Britain's domestic news agency, the Press Association, said a man phoned a newspaper in Belfast claiming to represent an Irish republican group called "The Avengers," saying they were responsible for the two bombings.

Meanwhile, terrorists struck in Northern Ireland during the night, shooting one man dead and devastating the heart of a small country town with a powerful bomb.

In the neighboring Irish republic, teams of navy frogmen waited for the weather to clear before resuming an underwater search for the secrets of a ship said to have been running arms for the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The body of a man, about 25, was found early today sprawled in a ditch at the side of a road. Police said he had been shot in the head from close range.

Late Monday night 100 pounds of gelignite exploded in Dungiven, County Londonderry.

It caused widespread damage in the main street and wounded three girls who were hit by fragments of glass.

Ocean Falls Humming

Ocean Falls, the newly-acquired government mill town in northern B.C., is making paper ahead of schedule and drawing back many former employees.

Production was due to start in May but officials decided to keep one of the paper machines going following the former owner's official departure at the end of March.

A bill setting out the government acquisition procedure was introduced in the legislature Monday. (See Page 3.)

Ted Vesak, the appointed manager, explained in an interview today that most employee needs are being met.

Of former employees, 90 are staying on. Another 32 who left after Crown Zellerbach announced its pull-out last April have applied to return. And another 43 former employees have also applied. Beyond that there are 200 applications from people elsewhere in the province.

There are also 20 student workers employed.

"We are much farther along than anybody ever hoped for," Vesak said.

He added, however, that some senior paper makers, welders and pipefitters will be required to complete employee requirements.

The whole town is run through its one industry and to keep non-mill operations functioning, it was necessary to keep the steam plant running. Therefore it was decided to keep one of the paper machines running, Vesak said.

He anticipates that one of the newsprint machines will begin operating in May, and the other sometime following that. The company has orders for the paper in B.C. and is receiving raw materials.

The town's hospital and hotel are operating. Pacific Western Airlines and Northland Navigation are supplying the town, and other services are running normally, Vesak said.

HEAL WOUNDS URGES PoW

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The senior U.S. civilian prisoner-of-war, who spent 4½ years in solitary confinement, called Monday for compassionate aid to "heal the wounds" of both sides in Vietnam.

Philip Manhard, 51, and a veteran diplomat, told a state department news conference he experienced some of the same mistreatment and torture now being described by fellow PoWs.

But while the tales of ordeals have stimulated new opposition to post-war aid for North Vietnam, Manhard urged the opposite course.

"I was mistreated, I was tortured — but only once for about 15 hours," when he was trussed over a cross-beam to force him to talk, he said.

Manhard said he also suffered a serious digestive problem for three years from inadequate nourishment.

Nevertheless, speaking as a citizen and not "a bureaucrat," Manhard said, "our best interests lie in trying to do what we reasonably can to establish a period of what I call genuine, stable, peaceful co-existence" in Vietnam.

The "Vietnamese people in general," he said, "have suffered a great deal — from everybody."

America's traditional "generosity and forgiveness," Manhard said, "should go beyond ideological boundaries and the hardships of the past" to help repair "the tremendous amount of damage" on both sides of the struggle.

Manhard, on his first trip to the state department from Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he is still under treatment, said he is too much out of touch with events to speak of sums of money or types of aid.

City Bidding for Historic Home

The city of Victoria will negotiate with Peter Rapanos, owner of an historic residence at 1270 Yates, for preservation of the house along with approval for apartment development at the rear of the site.

The compromise arising out of a request for rezoning to apartment use of a small portion of the whole site by Rapanos, was pushed for by Ald. Sam Bawlf.

Bawlf produced figures which he said proved the large, old residence, which houses 15 apartments, was currently a paying proposition which gave the site extra value in itself.

A rear site could house a 20-apartment building and make the whole enterprise a perfctly good business proposition, he argued.

Council members had tabled the rezoning application because they feared a rezoning would both boost property speculation and doom the well-preserved mansion.

It was not agreed whether Bawlf, who was detailed to meet with Rapanos, would offer a down-zoning of the immediate house site in exchange for the apartment zoning sought, or whether a registered covenant not to destroy the house would be requested.

In the same discussion Ald. Af Hood said it was most important that council clarify very quickly its policy on buildings with heritage value.

"For example, I believe the owner is planning to install aluminum windows in this house. What can we do about that?"

Bawlf said that in the longer view council should be considering conversion of such buildings to use as neighborhood pubs under announced provincial legislation.

"A building like this is a landmark with an important effect on the psyche (soul) of the neighborhood," he commented.

MASSIVE BLACKOUT

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — More than two million customers of Florida Power and Light Co. in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties were without electricity today after four massive generators shut down at a power plant, a company spokesman said.

"Due to problems unknown at this point, the four generating units at our Port Everglades plant tripped out of service," spokesman Lory Snipes said.

"Apparently, they were responding to signals from our automatic protective devices, which are designed to protect the generators when they sense a problem."

Fred Shortell, an insurance salesman whose office is near the power company's big generating plant, said: "I heard this roar and the power went out."

Shortell said he looked toward the generating station and saw "steam shooting straight up in the air 40 feet" from a valve. "I heard a roar like a jet engine," he said.

By this time it was nearly 4 p.m.

"They didn't even apologize," Gajowski said. "I was so scared I'm still shaking.

"I hope this doesn't happen to anybody else — I'm kind of a big guy but I was petrified.

"I would maybe have kicked a gun away and then hit one over the head," he said. "What would have happened then?"

"I just wonder if they would have shot."

As part of the exercise, servicemen in old clothes are "infiltrating" CFB Esquimalt, while others are defending the base from bomb scares, kidnappings and demonstrations.

Esquimalt was chosen as site of the exercise because it "is built like a simulated city," according to one spokesman.

Defending the base are members of the Third Battalion Princess Pats, and the Third Field Squadron from Chilliwack.

Assaults on the base are being made by another battalion of the Princess Pats, the Lord Strathcona Horse and members of the army engineers and army signal corps.

Commander of the exercise, Brig.-Gen. G. G. Brown of Calgary said over-enthusiasm on the part of some of the men taking part in the exercise led to the "arrests."

Gajowski says he tried to explain who they were and what they were doing there, but no one would listen to him.

It all brought back bad memories for the 37-year-old construction foreman who spent his childhood in Nazi Germany.

"I came to Canada to get away from this — I don't want to work with a gun in my back.

Priest's Tomb Uncovered

CAIRO (Reuter) — A team of Cairo University archeologists has discovered the tomb of the priest who mummified the body of King Chefren, the pharoah who was buried in one of the pyramids more than 4,000 years ago.

The discovery is considered an important one as it may throw light on the whereabouts of the pharoah's tomb which has never been found.

The archeologists unearthed the tomb of the priest, Ibis Raa, Monday during excavations on a site west of the three huge pyramids on Cairo's outskirts.

They found a fine limestone statue of the priest inside the tomb along with a mural which is being restored to see whether its inscriptions provide new clues to the location of Chefren's burial place.

Cairo University officials said the priest supervised the mummification and burial of King Chefren who ruled from 2680 to 2563 BC.

The search for the royal tomb and treasure house, believed to be hidden somewhere in the vast second pyramid, has been going on for more than a century.

Judge Dismisses Claim for Wages

John Woods, director of the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, failed in an attempt to sue his former employer for a month's wages. Judgment was handed down by Judge D. G. Ashby in small debts court today.

Woods claimed $400 damages against Slegg Bros. Lumber Ltd. and Henry Hudson Apartments Ltd. March 28, after Slegg Bros. sold the apartment building at the end of October.

Woods' position as property manager for Henry Hudson Apartments Ltd. terminated at the time of the sale and Woods claimed Slegg Bros. failed to give him a month's nootice.

The building was sold to a Judge Hansen, owner of Utah Apartment Holdings Inc., an American firm.

Counsel for the companies, Nicholas Lang, said the apartment building was sold with the understanding that Woods' employment would continue with the new owner.

Slegg Bros. controller John Graham testified that, "Ever since the building was built, it's been known it was for sale. Mr. Woods was quite aware of it."

The sale was supposed to be finalized at the end of September but it was held up, said Graham.

"It was then that both parties had made arrangements that he would stay on. In fact, he was paid in November by the new owner," he said.

Ashby said Woods suffered no loss of monies or position and he was aware of Slegg Bros. intentions.

Woods' lawyer, Douglas Christie, said an appeal is under consideration.

Pig in Poke to Socreds

The opposition parties in the legislature have branded the Columbia Cellulose purchase by the government Monday as somewhere between "a pig in a poke" and "a big white elephant."

Those two descriptions came from the Social Credit and Conservative parties respectively. The most harsh criticism, however, came from the Liberals, who said buying into Colcel is "like the province buying a share in the Titanic after it hit the iceberg."

Socred spokesman Ed Smith (SC—North Peace) said "the only people laughing right now are the Yankee traders.

"They finally found a buyer and that buyer may have bought the biggest pig in a poke that we have ever seen in this province."

Smith said that if private industry could not make Colcel a profitable operation, there is no reason to expect the government to be able to.

He said the government has bought 79 per cent of a corporation with "a very questionable value." Replacement value of the company's assets should not be considered in the merits of the deal, he said because that is like talking about apples and oranges.

The province still has the responsibiity of picking up $70 million of indebtedness, he said.

The Liberal caucus said the Colcel deal is "a mistake in judgment" on the part of the government. There is "no prospect of the operation returning sufficient profit for the repayment of long-term debt and to generate sufficient capital for future development."

As a result, the Liberals said, "substantial infusions of public capital will be required in the future."

Conservative spokesman Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) said "one could only assume that the Celanese Corporation would not be giving up assets reported to be worth $200 million unless they felt it was impossible to maintain a viable enterprise.

"I would fear that the government is buying a big, white elephant," he said.

. . . MEAT BOYCOTT

of American cattle being imported into Canada, many raised on a hormone drug which is outlawed in this country, Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Monday.

The drug—DES—has been banned in Canada. Stewart said in Toronto that some mice fed with the substance had developed cancer.

The Great Scott chain, with 46 outlets in Michigan, said it was rolling back beef, pork and lamb prices to the lowest price levels charged in March, instead of holding to the highest prices, as allowed by the president's ceiling order. Choice chuck steaks, for istance, 98 cents a pound under the ceiling limits, will be 79 cents, the chain said.

But there have been no price predictions in Victoria.

"Up to now they (consumers) haven't taken the boycott too seriously," reports Al Bailey, manager of Victoria Meat Market.

"But people like to go along with the crowd," he said, estimating the boycott should intensify today because "it has been promoted through the media so much, and everyone will join up."

Bailey said he "heartily agrees with the Consumers' Association of Canada that the boycott will have no permanent long-term effect.

"If I thought for a minute that it would help, I would have co-operated with all the retailers for a week and boycotted meat sales myself."

Arnold Nobbs, of Newport Meat Market, said he would have supported the boycott too, if beef prices had risen again this week.

"If beef wholesale had gone up this week, I wouldn't have bought any at all."

Bob Gilson, of Gilson's Meats Ltd., figures the boycott has led men to take over the meat shopping for the week.

"With all the publicity about the high cost of meat, husbands have said to their wives that they'll take care of buying the meat for the week," he said.

Can-Cel: On Market Since '68

because he felt the company would then close down its money-losing operations in the Prince Rupert area.

The following operations will be controlled by the provincial government when the deal is closed June 29 of this year:

A kraft mill at Prince Rupert, a sulphite mill at Kitwanga in northern B.C., a kraft mill at Castlegar and a sawmill in the Arrow Lakes area.

9 MILLION ACRES

In addition, the tree farm licence holdings of Columbia Cellulose, which total more than 9.1 million acres, or 40 per cent of all the lands currently under tree farm licences, will revert back to the direct control of the provincial government.

Williams said the replacement value of the Columbia Cellulose operations is about $200 million.

Under terms of the agreement, which was signed at 1:15 p.m. Monday, the remaining 21 per cent common shares of Canadian Cellulose will be distributed to Columbia Cellulose's more than 8,000 public shareholders.

By doing this, Williams said, the "powerless minority" within the companies will be assured of their position in relation to the assets of the company.

COMMON SHARE

Anyone holding one common share in Colcel will receive one common share in Canadian Cellulose and anyone holding one preferred share in Colcel will receive two common shares in Canadian Cellulose.

Holders of preferred shares in Colcel will also receive $1.80 in cash, representing arrears in dividends over the last year and a half. The money required to pay these areas will be paid by Celanese.

Long-term debt owed by Canadian Cellulose to banks and other creditors amounts to $70.5 million. The debt is repayable at an interest rate of six per cent.

The agreement specifies that this money must be paid back at a rate of $6 million per year.

Williams said since it is unlikely Canadian Cellulose will be able to turn a profit in its first year of operation under B.C. government control, the first $6 million payment will have to be provided in one of two ways — a loan from another bank or from the government. It has not been decided which route will be taken, he said.

POTENTIAL

Williams said the profit potential of the Canadian Cellulose operations will be dependent to a great extent on negotiations which are currently being conducted between the Canadian National Railway and the provincial government on northern transportation problems.

Rail development, freight rates and development of sawmills in the northern part of the province will have "an immense effect" on the operations of the government-controlled pulp company, he said.

He said it is hoped that agreement on the transportation problems will be reached "fairly soon."

The government is primarily interested in turning the money-losing operations in the northwestern part of the province into profitable ones, Williams said.

"The government sees the agreement as only one step in a series of inter-related programs that will ensure a great economic future for northern B.C."

GOOD NUMBER

Williams said it is the government's intention to develop "a good number" of sawmills in northern B.C.

Waste wood from these operations could well be used in the pulp-producing process in northern pulp mills.

Museum Move Gets Nod

A proposal to move the Maritime Museum of B.C. to the historic federal-owned Malahat Building on Wharf Street, is not opposed by museum trustees.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said Monday he has been assured by federal Public Works Minister Jean Dube that he is willing to turn the building over to the city at a price to be negotiated.

Bawlf said tentative plans are to build a new structure adjacent to the Malahat building, and use both to house the Maritime Museum now located in Bastion Square.

Museum director Col. J. W. D. Symons said the directors would not oppose such a move providing costs to build an annex to the Malahat, plus costs of moving the collection and setting it up, are met by somebody else.

"We agree that the Malahat building should be preserved," he said.

Bawlf said the minister is opposed to selling the building and the half-acre property to the city for $1.

But he added the city might be able to get funds from the federal government's historic sites branch for the acquisition of the property.

"But the important thing is that the minister has agreed to co-operate," he said. Dube said if the city council makes a formal request for the building, he would act on it immediately."

the weather

The strong ridge of high pressure over B.C. will weaken gradually during the next 48 hours. The disturbance over the Cariboo will continue to weaken today but the next system in the series will spread rain and strong winds over the north coast and the outer south coast early Wednesday morning and occasional rain over the central interior Wednesday afternoon.

WOMEN PROTEST 'EMASCULATION'

OTTAWA (CP) — A national women's group told Labor Minister John Munro Monday that their members will not accept an emasculated version of the government's proposed committee on the status of women.

Representatives of the National Action Committee gave the minister their ideas on how the committee should be set up, and at the same time asked for $35,000 in federal aid to support their organization.

Women, they said, will "react violently" if the committee is not empowered with the kind of muscle it needs to be politically effective.

The committee would undertake research, propose legislation and policies and consult with organizations concerned with the problems of women.

"We don't want a committee that will only sit a few times each year," said Laura Sabie, of St. Catharines.

"We will certainly oppose it if the women named to the committee are merely political appointments . . . We need people who aren't afraid to rock the boat."

Lewis Blasts Bell Tel 'Gouging'

By GARRY FAIRBAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — It was almost David Lewis Day in the Commons Monday, as the New Democrat leader belligerently took on Bell Canada and multinational corporations in two major speeches.

In the afternoon debate, he gave grudging praise to the government's foreign investment review bill, calling it a great improvement over a similar bill last year but vowing to press for amendments in committee to strengthen it.

Then he won approval from Commons Speakers Lucien Lamoureux to suspend discussion of that bill and hold a special evening debate on recent rate increases granted to Bell Canada by the Canadian transport commission.

"It is fully time to call a halt to the monopolist gouging by Bell Canada of the people of this country," he declared in a hard-hitting speech.

Mr. Lewis noted that Bell has had four increases in 3½ years and has yet another application before the transport commission asking for rate increases to take effect next year.

Bell Canada serves Ontario, Quebec, Labrador and part of the Northwest Territories.

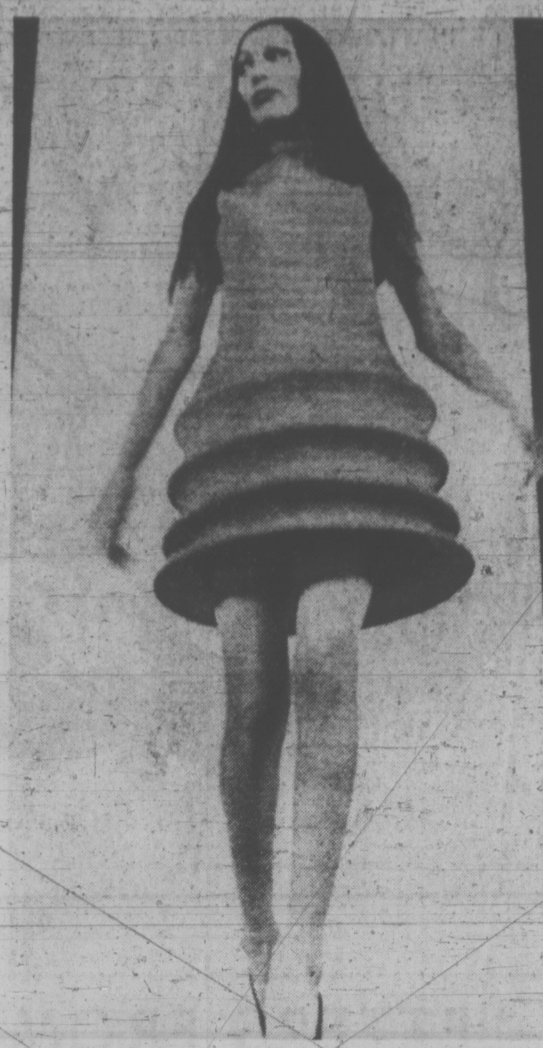
He urged the government to use its power to suspend the commission decision and review the case to see whether the increases should be disallowed.

Conservative spokesmen attacked the increases as excessive, while Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) said the commission's procedure for hearing the Bell application did not convince the public their interests were being protected.

Under the rule permitting the special debate, no motion concerning the Bell increases was proposed and thus there was no vote on the subject. The debate came under provisions enabling the Speaker to schedule a debate on important and urgent issues. No parties objected.

Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said the government is unlikely to intervene in the commission decision but will put it through routine review.

The increases include raising basic monthly charges for residential telephone service by five cents, various increases in long-distance calls, and adding $2.75 immediately and $2.75 Jan. 1, 1974, to the $11 charge for telephone installation.



FARTHINGALES AND HOOP SKIRTS may have been around in the time of Good Queen Bess but they were a lot longer than the hoop skirt unveiled Monday by Paris designer Pierre Cardin as part of his spring collection.

Gov't Moves for Big Increases In Ex-Civil Servant Pensions

Legislation introduced Monday by the government will increase pensions paid to retired civil servants, college employees, teachers and municipal employees.

The most dramatic potential increase goes to teachers who retired in 1950 or earlier. Their pensions will go up by 66 per cent. Those who retired in 1971 will have their pensions increased by three per cent, and 1970 superannuates by six per cent.

Other retired employees will get similar increases if they retired in the past two years.

Municipal employees who retired in 1969 or earlier will get eight per cent increases, as will civil servants who retired March 31, 1970, or earlier.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall introduced the amendments to the Civil Service Superannuation Act, the College Pension Act, the Teachers' Pensions Act and the Municipal Superannuation Act.

PORTABLE

Provision is made in all four acts for reduction from seven to five years of the number of years of highest average salary used in computing pensions.

The municipal, college and teacher pensions are made portable with other B.C. public pension plans.

A total of 100,000 people are affected by the pension improvements, Hall said after the legislation was introduced.

It will cost the government about $3 million extra to pay pension benefits to people whose plans are improved by the legislation, he said.

Under terms of the legislation, the government's power to invest pension funds will be increased. The government will be able to invest funds in any corporation it wishes.

Previously, investments were limited to B.C. Hydro and the B.C. Railway, as well as school and hospital bonds.

A total of $700 million is now invested in various projects, mostly in B.C. Hydro development bonds.

Hall said it is the intention of the government to standardize the pension plans of various employee groups.

REFUNDS

All plans will permit refunds of voluntary contributions at the time of retirement.

Distinctions between widows and widowers are to be eliminated, he said, with widowers eligible for the same benefits if their wives die while employed by the government or as teachers or municipalities.

A change in teachers' pensions will see the government matching contributions with employees by 1977.

At present, the government contribution is only 60 per cent of the employees' contributions.

Hall said the amendments to the pension legislation are the result of work by the commissioner of pensions and committees from the employee groups covered.

A long-range problem to be studied by these groups will be the question of early retirements, he said.

$3M FOR OCEAN FALLS

Legislation was introduced Monday by Resources Minister Bob Williams which will enable the government to acquire the paper mill operations at the coastal community of Ocean Falls.

The legislation sets up the Ocean Falls Corporation, which will manage the paper mill for the government. The government purchased the mill from Crown Zellerbach at a cost of $1 million March 16.

Williams said the actual cash price was $790,000. The remaining cost is connected to mortgaged homes in the Ocean Falls area.

The minister said the legislation sets no limit to the amount of working capital which will go to the crown corporation for operation of the mill. A sum of $3 million will be supplied at first, he said.

A separate piece of legislation supplies $1 million, which will go to Crown Zellerbach as payment for the mill operations.

The money has not been paid yet to the company, Williams said, adding that he does not know when it will.

The legislation is retroactive to March 31, when Crown Zellerbach officials had said it would be shutting down the Ocean Falls operation.

Under the legislation, the Ocean Falls Corporation will consist of not less than three directors appointed by the cabinet.

A report on the corporation's operations is to be filed in the legislature each year, with a financial statement.

No-Confidence Vote Fails

The provincial government withstood a non-confidence motion in the legislature Monday over Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer's handling of his portfolio.

The vote was 39-9, with Social Credit members standing alone in the minority.

Liberal and Conservative MLAs sided with the government, describing the move to reduce Lorimer's salary to $1 as "frivolous" and "vexatious."

Alex Fraser (SC-Cariboo) led the move against Lorimer noting that he is a lawyer and charging that he "moved illegally in ordering the amalgamation of Kamloops and Kelowna."

Fraser said he could not see the necessity of amalgamations without a local vote.

"He should be called the minister of shotgun marriages," he said.

Allan Williams (L-West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said it was ridiculous to expect Lorimer to undo in seven or eight months what the previous government had done in 20 years.

NO BASIS

"There is no basis on which anyone can reasonably or logically support this motion," he said.

Lorimer said the official opposition can't stand a minister who is prepared to make a decision.

"Some of my decisions may not be correct. At least I have a batting average of over 50 per cent. The government has a duty to make decisions, whether popular or unpopular."

He said there will be no more low-income housing ghettoes because his department planned a mix of all income groups.

Fraser was also critical of the government ordering 99 buses, some of them from a Manitoba crown corporation, without first going to tender.

He said the move cost the province $500,000 and charged the government evaded tenders "to save their friends in Manitoba."

Bob McLelland (SC-Langley) said failure to call tenders for the buses is "the first step back to patronage.

"They could have been built $5,000 per vehicle cheaper," he said.

Lorimer said the buses were ordered without tendering because of a time element which meant a year's delay unless action was taken.

Of a claim that one company could have done the job $5,000 per vehicle cheaper, Lorimer said this company had never built a transit bus, only quite-different school buses.

Nothing New About It

The B.C. government's philosophy regarding telephone and cablevision systems in this province was clarified last week by Public Works Minister Bill Hartley. He said that the NDP government is attracted to this area of communications by its desire to reduce rates to the public and to improve services in thinly-populated outlying districts.

No one will quarrel with the commendability of such goals, though there are some who will wonder whether they will be achieved by government intervention. Government's record of participation in business and industry is not always accompanied by well-balanced ledgers and satisfied customers. In a few years we may find the services in question costing more, with no marked increase in efficiency. The huge profits alleged to have been made by existing companies could well vanish if promised extensions and improvements are realized, and a further tapping of the public purse would follow.

There are other reasons to look askance as the provincial government stretches its hand toward this field of communications. Whether the intention is to take control or only to exert pressure on the policy of existing companies, some questions must be asked. Where does control end? In the case of cablevision, may the government not be tempted to dictate program content; to impose, in effect, a form of censorship?

Childish hysteria, the socialists will reply. They will point out that even when their legislation contains big stick powers, the stick doesn't have to be used—except when people refuse to be sensible. Censorship is another old-fashioned bogey called up by the fat-cat publishers. Free enterprise has its own devious methods of muffling the truth, they will say—at any rate, the socialist truth.

It may be some time before the NDP government's wishes with respect to telephone and cablevision are fully realized, if indeed they ever are. Hitherto the federal government has guarded jealously its supervision of communications. But strange things happen in politics, and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, which currently controls the destinies of broadcasters and cablevision systems, has more than once shown its susceptibility to political pressures.

One signal comes through loud and clear from Mr. Hartley. There is nothing new about it. He simply adds another voice to the chorus that swells from Victoria's old legislative buildings these days. It sings the requiem of the rough and ready, boom or bust free enterprise system that has dragged British Columbia to its present point of economic development, leaving many victims on the way. We are now entering upon a phase of boom or bust socialism. It too will have its victims.

Which Indians?

Recent events at Wounded Knee in South Dakota have emphasized a point that should be recognized not only in the United States but in Canada. They underscore the inclination of too many white people to assume that Indians are united and of one mind in their approach to problems thrust upon them. True, they have a community of interests, share certain cultural qualities and philosophies and, for the most part, attribute their misfortunes to the invasion of the whiteman.

But within that framework of similarities, they express a wide variety of differences, both in the assessment of their problems and their approaches to solutions. It is significant that militant leaders of the American Indian Movement were ousted when a less militant group of Oglala-Sioux made their influence felt in the beleaguered community. The comment, "We could have terminated this problem earlier if it wasn't for the shenanigans of the A.I.M." reflects an attitude distinct from that of the movement which apparently provoked the siege.

This implies criticism of method rather than of the A.I.M.'s intent to focus attention on a prevailing condition on the reserve involved. And it might serve as a warning to Canadians who have been told by an Indian member of the London, Ontario, chapter of the A.I.M., who visited Wounded Knee as an observer, that similar events in Canada could emerge from Indian unrest.

But the London Indian's statement does not suggest that activities similar to those in the South Dakota settlement would automatically attract the support of all Indians in this country any more than it did in the United States.

The important fact to remember is that the Indian problem is a problem not solely of race but also of individuals. The possibility of an easy solution acceptable to all seems remote.

One for the Poll

It's a long time since a politician could buy a vote with a drink at the nearest bar. Voters today demand much more — a hospital, a school, a swimming pool, or perhaps a highway. Closing the drinking establishments and liquor stores on voting day is an anachronism that adds nothing to the balloting process and still less to the self-respect of the average voter.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald is therefore on the right track in suggesting that he will initiate a change in the existing law. Closed-on-election-day will eventually go the way of the man on horseback who had to ride ahead of steam trains with a warning flag. Maybe they can get him to ride ahead of the drinking voters driving home.

JAMES RESTON

Why So Reckless and Stupid?

SAN FRANCISCO — On the west coast these day, President Nixon is riding high, but even many of his strongest supporters here are troubled by the increasingly damaging evidence in the Watergate case.

In the past, this has been dismissed in the president's home state as the usual dirty tricks of national politics, and anyway something remote from the president. But James McCord's testimony that perjury was committed in the trial of the Watergate Seven, that others were involved and that he was afraid to tell his story to the FBI, has raised some new questions here as elsewhere.

Also, the mood here is more critical of the president than it was at election time. Despite the ceasefire in Vietnam, the steep rise in prices, the devaluation of the dollar, the threat of gasoline rationing, the overturning of the California equal education law by the Nixon Court, and the president's continuing battles with Congress and the press have all hurt the administration.

Big Question

How could it be, even Nixon supporters ask, that an administration that has been so cautious, shrewd and successful in dealing with world affairs, could also be so reckless, awkward and even stupid in dealing with human affairs?

The answer to this seems to be that politicians have a way of doing fairly well on major questions and then stumbling into trouble over secondary issues.

This was Harry Truman's problem. Harry usually did all right on the big things and messed up the liittle things.

President Kennedy came into office as the darling of the young and the symbol of the coming age but he staggered into the Cuban Bay of Pigs disaster and never quite recovered from it.

In the 1972 presidential election, Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic candidate, picked Sen. Tom Eagleton of Missouri as his vice-presidential running mate and he was never quite able to explain effectively why he had picked him or why he dumped him.

Now President Nixon, who wants to concentrate on the monetary, trade, inflation and security problems in the world, finds himself dealing instead with the secondary issues of campaign financing, and the Watergate, which he might easily have avoided.

For example, the Republican Committee for the Re-election of the president didn't have to get involved in elaborate schemes to raise and conceal illegal money in the last campaign. They had all the money they needed. They were well financed, and well ahead of the Democrats from the start, and probably would have ended up with a substantial surplus even if they had played the game straight.

. . . telling everything

The Watergate burglary is an even better example of avoidable stupidity. Leaving the law and the clumsiness of the burglars aside, what rational argument could be made for the Nixon re-election committee taking such spectacular risks, or assuming that their men wouldn't confess if they were caught?

Now, of course, the burglars are talking. James McCord, facing jail or telling the truth, is beginning to confess about the political pressures on him to take the rap in silence and to report on the other people involved in the conspiracy.

L. Patrick Gray, the president's appointee as head of the FBI, who also has the problem of saving himself or saving the administration from charges of political deception, is obviously concentrating on saving his own neck. When he was under pressure from the White House, Gray told everything to Nixon's aides. Now, when he is under pressure from Congress, he is telling everything, or almost everything, to the senators.

Nobody out here is saying that the president himself knew about the slippery campaign finances or the Watergate conspiracy, but California knows him as a political alley fighter, and the longer the Watergate case goes on in the courts and Congress, the more suspicious people there are.

Also, those who know the president best in this part of the country know how much he insists on control and discipline of his staff, and they therefore find it hard to believe that the Watergate Seven could set up anything as daring as an espionage ring among the Democrats without the knowledge of somebody close to the president.

Injurious Suspicion

Even this atmosphere of suspicion, which the White House has encouraged by its refusal to try to clear up the charges, is bound to hurt the president.

He has welcomed and even provoked confrontation with Congress over the control of appropriations. He has demanded an absolute shield against formal testimony in Congress by members of his executive staff, while opposing any such shield for members of the press—all this while running into more and more trouble with prices, at home and trade abroad.

Against this background, even his popularity in bringing the troops and prisoners back from Vietnam has been hurt and the longer the Watergate case goes on, the more he is likely to be in trouble even in his home state.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Land Act

Douglas Fisher's article "The Land Act Furore: Much Ado About Little," (Times, March 24) was one of the saner and more dispassionate commentaries on Bill 42 I have encountered. Unlike certain radio hotliners, Mr. Fisher places the Land Commission Act in its proper perspective and points out that such a bill introduced in Ontario would scarcely rate a ripple.

The radio hot liners have done the province of B.C. a gross disservice by acting as catalytic agents to whip up so much unnecessary panic on strictly hypothetical points. Furthermore they have, knowingly or unknowingly, played directly into the hands of profit-hungry speculators and land developers — plus not a few disgruntled opposition members bent on exacting revenge at all costs. Throw in a sprinkling of "let's not rock the boat" types and the pot begins to bubble.

Many years ago novelist Victor Hugo wrote the following words: "Wide horizons tend to enlarge the mind; limited horizons, on the contrary, circumscribe it." How apropo they are today.

Why not give the government at least a chance to prove its integrity before slinging harpoons. For the sake of our rapidly dwindling farm land it's of the utmost importance that we do. — Frank Lockyer, 2145 Weiler Ave., Sidney.

True State

Thank you very much and, also, Mr. Roland Morgan for showing the people the state of our city government.

It is time that the people of our city were awakened to the true state of affairs. How many Victoria residents are members of another municipal board?

I have written several times to our city government and suggested the "ward" system so that the people could see and know their representative, but have not received any reply and now I know why. In my opinion, the present system is really unheard of before, by me anyway, and I have lived a long time in many cities and countries.

The people of Victoria can run their own affairs by voting for city residents only, and show it by voting in the next byelection for city residents only.

Thank you again for the expose. — Joe Atwell, 1485 Lang St.

Soccer Team

We, as parents of many juvenile soccer players, would like to thank the hard-working, well organized, volunteer efforts of the Lower Vancouver Island Juvenile Soccer Association, the coaches and managers in organizing and running another successful season of league play.

We would also like to congratulate the Cordova Bay Community Club who worked so hard to sponsor the two day Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association League playoffs at Lockside Park.

Thirty-two players, involving 19 soccer games, required a lot of organization and volunteer help. We parents appreciate your helping our boys.

We'd especially like to congratulate the Public Service Legion, division 1 team, in winning the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer League District Cup. They played their last game together as a team a week ago Sunday.

For eight years they played at Royal Oak as the Public Service Legion team. Over these years they developed into a good, co-ordinated team, became good friends, learned self-discipline, courage, determination, good sportsmanship win or lose, self-confidence, and had lots of fun.

In 1967-68 in division 6 they became league champions; in 1971-72 they became B.C. champions division 2 and in division 1 this year won the District Cup.

Good luck to them. May they keep up the same spirit as they go on to play on other Victoria soccer teams. — Don and Anne Pearson, 784 Claremont Ave.

Trash

Having typical male chauvinist attitudes, I have considered women's action groups to be a bit of a joke — until now.

I would support any protest against the radio show Feminine Forum on CJOR in Vancouver, a show which definitely exploits women's feelings and attitudes — and moderated by men, yet! The show wouldn't be as bad as it is if it had a female moderator.

But the blame doesn't rest entirely on the radio station, but on some of the callers themselves who are responsible for making the show such a success with voyeurs and masochists, which makes me question my own reasons for listening to that trash in the first place. Power to the peep-hole! — Austin Peckham, No. 3, 314 Cook St.

Let me congratulate you on the bit on the editorial page about the passing of the Damon Runyon character: "Harry the Horse" — Benjamin Caplan.

It is well known to one and all that "Harry the Horse" would never, but never, drop dead at any other betting window than the $50 one. Harry would consider it a slight to his sterling character if he was ever seen stepping up to place a bet at any window less than the $50 one.

Broadway Rose, Liver Lips, Bookie Bob, Sorrowful and the gang at Mindys are all lamenting the passing of "Harry" to be sure. Also Little Isadore and Spanish John. — W. Morgan, 805 Executive House; 730 Humboldt St.

Well . . . Uh . . .

It is most interesting to read all the letters in support of Bill 42. However, no one has bothered to speak up for those much maligned service clubs — the real estate companies and land developers.

After all, here they are providing a public service, building homes for the needy citizens of B.C. And do they ask for donations as the Community Chest does? Not at all. Heedless of their own needs they bravely forge ahead, donating their time and talent for the happiness of their fellow man. Now these able creatures are to be cast aside by a ruthless government, when all they've done is to cut a few measly trees and plough a little dirt.

As far as the food problem goes, everyone knows that real estate agents will personally deliver vegetables to every doorstep in a little basket, once our farmland is all subdivided. "Included with every new home — California cabbage for lifetime of purchaser."

So you see there's reason to worry. Our friends are being trodden upon by dirty Dave and his barbarians, who are spoiling the government game by actually living up to their election promises. We citizens must make it clear that we love this province and hate to see fruit, vegetables and flowers using up valuable space where subdivisions should be growing. — Mrs. Lois Gardner, No. 7—427 Linden Ave.

Reason

With reference to your story on page 15, March 28, Dean Vinay apparently made the comment that professors with tenure can only be fired for a good reason. I take it this means that professors without tenure can be fired for a bad reason, or no reason at all.

Am I right, Dean Vinay? — Juliet Robbins, 24 Bushby St.

On the Track

May I extend a heartfelt thank you to Roland Morgan for his expose of city development. Last Saturday's article does well to reveal some of the dynamics of structured inequality in our community.

As a fledgling student of sociology at Camosun College may I say that both my fellow students and my instructors are all in agreement that Mr. Morgan's article (and hopefully more like it) is more in line with what is needed in this community. Keep up the good work. — Steve Mainprize, 2602 Graham St.

Delivery

I would like to thank someone.

On Sunday, March 25, in the vicinity of Shelbourne and Hillside I lost a very important letter — addressed and stamped.

It reached its destination.

I am deeply grateful to some thoughtful and honest person, child or adult. — B. D. Dicks, 1672 Myrtle.

Reply to the Teachers

In your issue of March 29 you carried a very spirited defence of the schoolteaching profession by one of its anonymous members, "Kim Mason."

The letter was interesting, and also very enlightening in regard to many members of the schoolteaching profession.

As teachers' salaries are paid from public funds it may be pertinent to enquire if "Kim Mason" will identify those teachers who, (quote) "while they are teaching, run substantial businesses in their spare time."

How can they spare the time from their well-publicized, arduous, full-time duties in the educational field to engage in outside financial ventures which will obviously claim their prime interest?

Another observation from the anonymous "Kim Mason" will undoubtedly excite the curiosity of those unfortunate taxpayers who must concern themselves with the cost of maintaining their homes, feeding and clothing their families, is the fact that teachers travel far more than any other single group!

Apparently every school holiday, of which there are many, sees a large proportion of any staff winging their way to foreign climes where exposure to other cultures and people broaden their horizons, and subsequently, those of their pupils.

Such devotion, above and beyond the call of duty, should not go unrecognized unless one reflects that teachers are now about the only segment of society with the means and the time to journey to those romantic far-away places!

It is possible that the erudite "Kim Mason" has unwittingly opened a can of worms that the harassed taxpayers may find hard to digest! If the Greater Victoria School Board intend to fulfill their obligations to the public they could do no less than file "Kim Mason's" letter for introduction at the next negotiating meeting on teachers' salaries. — F. E. Wright, 993 Karen Crescent.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of April 3, 1913

London — Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, was found guilty at the Old Bailey sessions today and sentenced to three years penal servitude on the charge of inciting persons to commit damage. The trial lasted two days. The jury added a strong recommendation for mercy. When the judge pronounced the heavy sentence of three years, the crowd of women in the court rose in angry protest. Supporters cheered Mrs. Pankhurst and filed out of court singing "March on, march on" to the tune of the Marseillaise. In her address, the leader said "these trials are an example of what women are suffering in order to obtain their rights."

Militant Black Pressure Has Rhodesia Nervous

By MARTIN WORTHAM
New Statesman

Policeman and dog make arrest in Gwelo

SALISBURY — The secret trial of Peter Niesewand, the journalist accused of undisclosed offences against Ian Smith's harsh Official Secrets Act has attracted wise attention in the British press, but it is only one of several trials that have been going on in Rhodesia.

Last week three African guerrillas were sentenced to death. The fact is that the guerrillas' activities are worrying Smith more than he can publicly admit. Security force operations against them in the north-east of the country are assuming a distinct air of desperation.

By current world standards, the terrorist activity in Rhodesia is tame stuff. Since December guerrillas have struck at six scattered farmsteads in the Centenary Block, killing two Europeans. The significance of what has recently occurred is, however, that the attacks have been carried out by local Africans, many of whom have been working on the white tobacco farms by day.

Build Arm Caches

Even more unnerving for the whites was Ian Smith's belated admission that well-trained Zanu cadres had been crossing and recrossing the border through Northern Mozambique for at least eight months before making their presence felt. They had been able to instruct and equip local tribepeople and build up huge caches of sophisticated arms.

The degree of local support and sympathy for the nationlist guerrillas is clearly much greater than the government cares to say. The one clash between security forces and terrorists in Chiweshe was near the Howard Institute, a Salvation Army Mission at the southern end of the reserve, not more than 60 miles from the capital. In the current series of trials of Africans accused of terrorism most of the accused are teenagers.

Already there are weary groans from the country's dwindling liberals who say: "We told you so." Ever since the first guerrilla incursion into Rhodesia in 1964, the thin voices of reason have warned the Smith government that the 50,000 or so half-educated Africans who are forced to leave school early, with no job prospects, would return to rural subsistence areas, angry, bored and frustrated, and form fertile recruiting grounds for nationalists.

Apart from the sledgehammer security-force tactics, the government has invoked stringent regulations to "dissuade" Africans from assisting guerrillas. Under a system of collective fines, entire tribes and villages have had their cattle and crops confiscated merely on the suspicion of a white district commissioner that they may have sympathy with terrorists. None of this hearts-and-minds nonsense for the Rhodesian Front.

White Neurosis

These draconian measures have caused a ripple of discontent throughout the tribal areas. Beefy farmers arriving in Salisbury from outlying areas far removed from Centenary report that the locals are glowering and surly and the children throwing stones instead of smiles ("Hell, man those munts are angry").

So much for Smith's "happiest Africans." The guerrilla activity has brought to the surface a panicky white neurosis. Hair-raising tales of terrorgangs are in currency in the bars of Salisbury to such an extent that the Ministry of Information has been obliged to warn rumormongers that the penalty for spreading alarm and despondency is up to seven years' imprisonment.

Ian Smith's hasty and ill-conceived decision to close the border with Zambia emanated largely from this nervousness. The pressure was on from the whites for him to do something—anything — to demonstrate just how touch he (and they) could be.

The fact that the north-east offensive has very little to do with Zambia was neither here nor there. Everyone knew that Kaunda was harboring and assisting terrorists so he, as the only readily identifiable villain, had to have the big fist waved under his nose. Not a few hawks in the Front cabinet were pressing for an Israeli-style air strike against guerrilla camps in Zambia.

Smith, furnished by his Intelligence with details of Zambia's newly installed Rapier missile system, chose what he thought would be a less dangerous course. The big fist turned out to be a puny set of sweaty knuckles. When South Africa and Portugal made known their acute displeasure with the move, Smith climbed down and with an incredibly lame excuse reopened the border.

Ian Smith's image, once idiotically burnished on every copper souvenir from Salisbury, has taken a severe tarnishing. He is under pressure from a close-knit, wily Afrikaner group within the ruling party who see annexation by South Africa as Rhodesia's only hope as a Western, Christian "civilized country."

He is also deeply concerned by the rapidly-acquired popularity of the new Rhodesia Party, which has been attracting exceptionally large audiences to its public meetings. Smith has acknowledged the Rhodesia Party challenge in a typically ham-fisted manner. His Ministry of Information leaked to the local press some time ago the fact that Allan Savory, a founder of the new party and a professional ecologist, was to appear in court on an Official Secrets Act charge.

Only One Hope

The obsequious Rhodesia Herald dutifully ran the item on the front page without giving any details of the charge. The smear attempt was exposed earlier last month when Savory was fined for asking a civil servant to provide him with a report on government plans to develop a new game park.

The Rhodesia Party's policy is still vague and ill-defined, probably deliberately so as it aims to corner the ruling party's electoral market. It is basically an all-white grouping. paternalistic and only slightly to the left of the Front. Its appeal, however, lies in its youthful, intelligent and articulate leadership. African nationalists confide quietly that they could and would talk and get somewhere with the Rhodesia Party.

Smith knows he has only one chance to restore white faith fully; he must achieve a rapid and painless settlement with Britain. It is still very much his vaunted "first prize" and one which he and his colleagues are pursuing with increasingly desperate if inept vigor. The need is not only one of political popularity; it is quite clearly an economic imperative. Sanctions, after seven wearisome years, are very definitely biting — and biting hard.

Rhodesia needs access to world money markets for massive injections of capital if the country's infrastructure is to survive in any viable form. Plant and machinery ingeniously patched up over the past few years are now falling apart — irretrievably; there is no foreign exchange to pay for replacements.

Misery in Paradise

Bq JAMES P. STERBA
New York Times

TRIWUNG KIDAL, Indonesia — Misty volcanos on the horizon. Groves of banyan, bamboo and fruit trees. A dozen huts of green. A crystal blue sky with cotton-puff clouds. Beautiful maidens in brightly colored batik sarongs. Snoozing dogs, cows and goats. Naked children frolicking in a stream.

The village in East Java looks like the tropical-island paradise that affluent Westerns, living amid increasing clutter, frenzy and pollution, dream about. They never come to Triwung Kidal, not far southeast of Surabaya, but they do stream to Bali, the next island to the east, to soak up natural beauty and cultural riches and to see people living enviably close to nature. And in the snapshots they take home the village children are almost always smiling — as if smiling was compulsory in paradise.

To the casual visitor, living here would seem like the height of pleasure. It is not. It is difficult and dangerous. Triwung Kidal, like villages throughout Asia, is riddled with malnutrition and disease, poverty and ignorance.

Second of two articles

Important changes have occurred in Asia since the Second World War, when newly independent countries, with help from the major powers, undertook to improve the lives of the peasants — a program known as development. For Japan it was a rebuilding job. For China it was evolution into a totally different society — one with sharp authority and strict limits on the individual. For Vietnam it was the same old war. For the rest of southern Asia, from Pakistan to the Philippines, there were important changes too.

Nonetheless, the journey among the poor in this region, taking place after more than 25 years of development, is a confrontation with the question: Has anything changed? The people of Triwung Kidal, when asked, are undecided whether their lives are better or worse. Actually they are both, but the changes are difficult for the villagers to perceive.

Food, nutrition and health — only three of a dozen problems — serve to illustrate how far the village has come and how far it has to go.

Health data are woefully lacking in Indonesia, as in other underdeveloped countries, but a sketchy picture is possible from surveys, estimates and expert opinion, and from direct observation.

A small boy named Napi works in his father's fields. Napi looks only about eight years old but he is 14 — a fact that shocks outsiders. The villagers are shocked because he is just like the other 14-year-olds. The toll taken by malnutrition, disease and parasites is evident only if children are compared with the new generation of bigger, stronger children of well-to-do Indonesians in Jakarta.

Napi's village, population 4,200, looks healthy. The air is clean and fresh, and there are no festering piles of garbage. Dirty air and garbage are symbols of wealth, however. Triwung Kidal has no garbage because it cannot afford to throw anything away. Virtually everything of value is used until it is exhausted — cigarette butts, leaves, even hair combings.

Most people in Triwung Kidal cannot afford the healthful foods — fruits, vegetables, meat, eggs and other elements of a sound diet — that abound. Too valuable to eat, they must be sold. From the proceeds the villagers then buy more filling food of the basic inadequate diet — rice, corn, dried fish, cassava, soybean biscuits, and a few hot peppers and spinach-like greens.

The sale of a chicken brings enough to feed a medium-sized family for a week. Here, as in the musical "South Pacific," there are "mangoes and bananas you can pick right off the tree," but to peel and eat one rather than sell it is an extravagance. One egg or an egg-sized piece of meat a month is about all most people can afford.

Asian nutritionists say 2,100 calories a day is a minimum requirement. The average American eats 3,210 calories a day. The average Asian, combining rich and poor from Japan to Pakistan, gets 2,050 calories. The average Indonesian eats 1,500 to 1,700 calories; Napi, being a poor village boy, gets 1,100 to 1,400.

World food production has been increasing in both rich and poor countries at the rate of 2.9 per cent a year — keeping slightly ahead of world population growth, according to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. For nations like the U.S. and Japan, where birthrates are down drastically, that does not mean that everyone is eating more and better, only that more food is available. In poor countries like Indonesia the growth of food production is all but wiped out by population expansion.

The Green Revolution, the development of high-yield rice and wheat varieties and improved farming methods, is pointing to change in all this, at least temporarily, but in Triwung Kidal it still represents only a hope. Napi is probably eating only a little better than he used to, which means that he is not going to bed quite so underfed as before.

According to a recent conference of the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, "Food supply is very unevenly distributed, with the rich taking enough and more and the poor only what they can afford." It is estimated that some 25 per cent of the Asian population — nearly 600 million — do not have enough to eat.

In Triwung Kidal malnutrition is manifested in stunted physical and mental growth, in greater susceptibility to disease and in a general listlessness.

If Triwung Kidal's population had not doubled since the war the situation would presumably be better in many respects. Population growth is nudging the poor nations closer to breakdown. At the same time it is a symbol of success in improved sanitation, resulting in longer lives and gradually declining death rates.

Half of those who die in Indonesia are children under age five — roughly 2.4 million a year. If they died in a catastrophe, the conscience and compassion of the world would probably be aroused. Instead they die of drinking dirty water or eating contaminated food, or afflictions that a pill or an injection would easily remedy if either were available.

And for those who live past five there are many diseases that can make life in "paradise" less than pleasurable — tuberculosis, cholera, hookworm parasites, impaired vision from vitamin A deficiency, among them.

Coast Guard Needs Bolstering

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

Back at the beginning of last month, a 34-foot fishing boat got into trouble in heavy seas off the northwest tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The operator of the vessel was too sick to remain at the wheel and the other man on board didn't know how to keep the boat going. To make things worse, they didn't know where they were. The boat was taking water.

A desperate radio message went out to the RCMP at Masset.

At first, there was little the RCMP could do. Canadian search and rescue people had no vessels in the area. The nearest government ship, the environment department vessel Sooke Post, was at Sandspit, more than a day's sailing away.

The RCMP had to call the U.S. Coast Guard which promptly sent a helicopter into the area. Once the stricken fishing boat was spotted, the helicopter hung around until the RCMP were able to charter another fishing boat to go to the rescue. Last week, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union sent a protest to Ottawa.

"Such haphazard rescue procedures on our outer coast are not good enough," stated Archie Kaario, secretary of the union's standing committee on navigational aids and safety at sea.

"Do we have to wait for some major marine mishap before something is done?"

The complaint is timely. Already this year, there have been eight incidents in which fishing vessels have been lost. These were boats out taking part in the herring operations around Tofino, Bella Bella and the Gulf Islands.

Last year there was a total of 1,371 "marine incidents" along the West Coast.

No one knowledgeable about the weird and often ferocious waters along the B.C. coast complains about the efficiency of the Canadian Coast Guard or the search and rescue people. The complaint is aimed directly at Ottawa's reluctance to bolster the existing facilities.

On the surface, the resources available for rescue operations seem impressive enough. First of all, there is a primary search and rescue group involving three 95-foot cutters. Each of these vessels is assigned a patrol area. On the west coast of Vancouver Island, the Coast Guard has two 44-foot lifeboats standing by at Bamfield and Tofino. During the summer, a third lifeboat is positioned at Bull Harbor at the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The Coast Guard vessels Moorhen and Mallard — 40 feet in length — stand by at the mouth of False Creek. A hovercraft is on duty at the mouth of the Fraser River, where 45 per cent of all B.C. marine accidents occur.

In addition, there are a number of rubber rescue boats, four helicopters, five pilot boats, three big ministry of transport vessels (each over 100 feet long), 12 RCMP vessels, 30 environment department vessels, and about a dozen department of public works vessels — each of which is required to be available for rescue operations. Many of these however, are only available on a seasonal or daytime basis.

The area that needs to be covered in all these operations is vast. Envisioned as a train track, the "vital mileage" areas include a 500-mile stretch of coast line from Vancouver to Prince Rupert, a 250-mile stretch from Victoria to Cape Cook, another 100 miles from Prince Rupert to Langara, 50 miles from Prince Rupert to Rose Spit, 100 miles from Queen Charlotte City to Rose Spit. Even looked at in this extremely simplified way, it amounts to more than 1,000 miles of heavily-used coastal waterways. The area to be covered extends, particularly during the tuna fishing season, almost 50 miles out into the Pacific.

The fact that a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter had to be called in to plug a gaping hole in the search and rescue network indicates that the existing resources, however good they may be, are definitely not adequate. Transport Minister Jean Marchand has no grounds for complacency when lives are at stake on the West Coast.

At Firestone, we inspect a lot of tires on customers' cars. And we see a lot of tires that have been ruined long before their time.
Most times, improper wheel alignment is the culprit. When wheels are out of true, the tires are scuffed, and scraped. Tread will be worn off on one edge. There may be bald patches showing up.
At one time or another every car suffers from improper wheel alignment.
So to get the most for your tire dollar, drive in for a Firestone wheel alignment. That little $5.88 ounce of prevention can save you the price of a new set of tires.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Sam Ervin Monday rejected a White House suggestion that presidential aides appear informally before the Watergate investigating committee, observing that they are not "royalty or nobility" who can be excused from testifying under oath and in public.

"I'm not going to let anybody come down like Nicodemus by night and whisper something in my ear that the public can't hear," commented Ervin.

The Biblical reference was to Nicodemus, the Pharisee ruler who went to see Jesus secretly at night, not wanting to commit himself openly.

Ervin, who heads the seven-member investigating committee, said he would accept nothing less than the sworn testimony of presidential aides in public sessions and added: "Divine right went out with the American revolution, and doesn't belong to White House aides."

In San Clemente, Calif., presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler responded with the stiff White House criticism of the Ervin committee, citing what he called "irresponsible leaks in tidal wave proportions" from a closed-door session last week.

"I would encourage the chairman," Ziegler said, "to get his own disorganized house in order so that the investigation can go forward in a proper atmosphere of traditional fairness and due process."

The clash apparently left the Ervin committee and the White House more than ever at an impasse over the president's claim that "executive privilege" allows him to keep his aides from testifying before Congress.

The president has said he would welcome a court test to determine whether his aides could be forced to testify.

Query Given Non-Answer

A Liberal MLA got a "non-answer" to a question about increased travelling expenses for "non-people" in the commercial transport department during estimates debates in the legislature Monday.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) asked why office expenses were increased to $2,500 from $350 and travelling expenses to $7,000 from $3,500 when the estimates showed the minister, Jim Lorimer, is paid as municipal affairs minister.

Lorimer's secretary is also paid from the municipal affairs coffers, as was an executive assistant who is no longer there, Williams noted.

The executive was on the payroll during the last financial year.

"Why are we spending $7,000 in travelling expense for "non-people?" Williams asked.

Commercial Transport Minister Lorimer said it is difficult to answer why these figures are here.

The $1.5 million estimates for the department were passed after 90 minutes of debate.

'Dictatorial' Nixon Hit

WASHINGTON (WP) — Accusing President Nixon of an attempt at "one-man rule," Sen. Edmund Muskie said Monday the president wants "a blank cheque" to carry on the war as he pleases, make all budget decisions unilaterally, allocate tax burdens and determine whether the public will ever hear the truth about the Watergate bugging incident.

Speaking as the official designee of the house and senate democratic leadership to respond to last week's nationwide television speech by President Nixon, Muskie said:

"This notion of one-man rule over the budget, over inflation and over the Watergate case constitutes an abuse of the president's power."

Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield and House speaker Carl Albert asked all three major networks to give "live" coverage to Muskie's speech, on grounds it constituted a congressional reply to presidential TV assertions about the budget and his relations with congress.

All three declined, although camera crews were sent to take footage for later use.

"I'm disappointed, to put it mildly," said Mansfield of the networks' failure to show Muskie "live."

Sen. John Pastore, chairman of the communications subcommittee, which has jurisdiction over the Federal Communications Committee and network broadcasting, said "the networks were unwise under the circumstances . . . but it's more a question of policy rather than violation of law."

"Their view was that, they shouldn't set the precedent of giving equal time every time the president makes a report to the nation," said Pastore.

Democratic spokesmen had told network news executives that it was a distortion to give the president a 100,000,000 audience for an attack on Congress and then give the Democratic response no "live" time at all.

MARCH WAS LAMB-LIKE MONTH

March was warmer, drier, sunnier and less windy than usual, the regional climate data centre at Gonzales Observatory reported today.

The average temperature was 45 degrees, about seven degrees above normal. The high and low recorded were 55 on March 25 and 34 on March 17.

The sun shone for 154 hours during the month, three hours above the average and total precipitation is listed at .54 inches, 1.39 inches less than usual. Average wind speed was 9.6 miles per hour.

Evidence 'Faked' Falconer Charges

An international group, dominated by members of the U.S. Department of the Interior, is trying to control the world's natural resources, Frank Beebe, Victoria falconry expert, said Monday.

Angered by Recreation and Conservation Minister Robert Williams' announcement that capturing peregrine falcons for falconry is banned, Beebe said Monday politicians like Williams are making such decisions on evidence that has been "faked."

Beebe, who is an artist with the Provincial Museum, said he has been "hounded across the North American continent" because of his interest in falcons. In 1970 he was arrested in Quebec and fined $2,200 for illegally hunting and possessing falcons. Two years before he was acquitted on a similar charge in Victoria.

"The U.S. Department of the Interior said 'get that guy,' and they did," he said. "I've been caught in the eye of the hurricane."

Beebe has sold three birds out of the country, all under proper permit. One was at the request of a Canadian mining company and was finally delivered as a goodwill gesture to Amsterdam.

The two others were requested by the U.K. trade commissioner, again as a goodwill gesture. These were given by commissioner to a London trading company and finally sent to the Middle East.

Beebe said before the "fake evidence" and the "hysteria" was generated birds could be bought for about $500 but now they cost $10,000. Only Canada's far north has regional control, he said. The rest of the world has placed a ban on importing and exporting.

He accused the U.S. Interior Department's administrator of deliberately upsetting a hearing decision in Washington, D.C., which ruled that the pesticide DDT was not responsible for endangering falcons.

Beebe said the department had already declared that the American peregrine falcon (falco peregrine anatunt) and the Arctic peregrine falcon (falco peregrinus tundrius) endangered species.

Because of this action, Beebe said, the administrator overruled the hearing's findings that DDT was the culprit.

Oppel, Mother Return Home From Hospital

COURTENAY — Lloyd Oppel, who contracted malaria during his internment in an Indochina prison camp, returned home from hospital with his ailing mother Monday under a nurse's care.

Magnus Oppel, a 72-year-old retired logger, said his 21-year-old son was "not feeling too bad" and the condition of his wife, Phyllis, 62, had improved tremendously.

Mrs. Opel had been listed in serious condition since she entered St. Joseph's hospital in nearby Comox, B.C., last week with what was described as a heart condition.

Lloyd who had told newsmen he would "go to the hospital for awhile" to recover fully from malaria, was never admitted as a patient, the hospital said.

Magnus Oppel said both his son and wife were under doctor's orders not to speak with the press. A nurse was stationed at the Oppel home.

Tax Evasion Charged

NANAIMO — A Nanaimo man appeared in provincial court here Monday on a charge of evading payment of income taxes on earnings of $22,192.95 between January, 1968 and April, 1972.

Robert G. Povey is also charged with four counts of making false or deceptive statements on income tax returns, for 1968, 1969, 1970 and 1971.

At the same time, Povey appeared in court to answer a charge of evasion of income tax laid against the Queen's Hotel in Nanaimo, of which he is a director.

It is alleged in the charge that tax on income totalling $21,148.55, between September, 1967 and March, 1972, was evaded through nonpayment.

Povey was remanded to April 16.

Man's Condition Still Critical

A 48-year-old Victoria man remains in critical condition at Victoria General Hospital after an accident near Quadra and Balmoral at 7:20 p.m., Saturday.

Robert Roy Wicks, 2117 Sayward, suffered a fractured back and hip when struck by a car driven by Robert Amery Hoy, 2008 Fernwood, while walking across Quadra, police said.

In Saanich, weekend traffic mishaps sent three people to hospital.

At 12:35 p.m., Sunday, Arthur and Elsie Litkenhaus, 2251 Kinross, were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital after colliding with a tree at Cordova Bay Road and Blenkinsop.

Mrs. Litkenhaus, 75, is in fairly good condition with broken ribs and her husband, 83, is in fairly good condition with face cuts and an injured hip.

John Howard, 21, of 2-1046 View, received a broken collar bone and stomach injuries when a motorcycle he was riding collided with a 1963 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by Bruce Abbott, 31, of Mill Bay.

The accident occurred near the Trans-Canada Highway and Admirals Road at 1:15 p.m., Sunday. Howard is in good condition at Victoria General.

Woman Wasn't Walking On Road

A 49-year-old woman, killed on Sooke Road, March 29, was walking towards the traffic on the shoulder of the road, not on the hard surface, according to testimony given at an inquest into her death Monday.

Mrs. Margaret Pawsey was killed during a visit from England with her sister Vera Bodman, of 2627 Sooke Rd.

The two women and Mrs. Bodman's six-year-old daughter were walking along Sooke Road when Mrs. Pawsey was struck by a pickup truck towing a trailer driven by Daniel George Fast, 2206 Church St.

LOST CONTROL

Carol Brown, 4537 Rocky Point, told the inquest she was driving behind Fast. She said the trailer went out of control.

"It was swaying," she said, "He had lost control That's all I can say."

"There was no fishtailing or jackknifing until such time as I applied the brakes," Fast testified, "I applied them because something hit the windshield of my truck."

He told the inquest he stopped the truck and got out. The woman was lying on the ground.

IMPACE

He said he was certain he was not off hard surface at the time of impact.

During his testimony Fast broke down and Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre called a short adjournment to let him regain his composure.

Dr. John Marsden a pathologist at Victoria General Hospital said Mrs. Pawsey died of "very extensive brain damage."

St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to 7:30 p.m. today.

Lands End Slash Woe Stalemate

North Saanich council has reached a stalemate in the settlement of slash-clearing problems on Lands End Road.

In response to a council invitation, a delegation from A. S. Bains Development Ltd. on Monday discussed the responsibility for clearing of ditches and slash on Bains' property, corner of West Saanich Road and Lands End Road.

Tree-clearing operations were temporarily stopped by council order in January, 1972, and the property has posed fire hazard and flooding problems ever since, according to aldermen.

North Saanich municipality has now threatened to issue an order for collecting of slash or alternatively, completion of the work at the owner's expense.

EMBARRASSED

Michael Young, lawyer representing Bains, said: "We are as embarrassed as council is."

Young explained that the principle cause in the delay is the contractor, Ron Smith, employed to clear the site, who, said Young, had been derelict in his contract to Bains.

Young said he was not prepared to commit his client to an April 17 deadline for work completion set by council and suggested grounds for such an order would be challenged in the courts.

The matter was tabled with registered opposition from Ald. Paul Grieve.

In other business, council gave three readings to a bylaw authorizing an increase in pay for members. The mayor's indemnity increases from $2,600 to $3,600 and aldermen move from $700 to $1,200 a year.

Council turned down a request from Sidney for a grant to support the senior citizens' centre in that town.

A letter from Sidney council stated that 71 of the 486 people registered at the centre last year were North Saanich residents and asked for $443, 14 per cent of the total operating costs in 1972.

Ald. Doug Boon questioned a grant based on last year's figures and Ald. Nell Horth said that the centre was built because of a favorable referendum by Sidney voters, with provincial government help.

Ald. Grieve warned that such refusal would not create a favorable atmosphere for upcoming negotiations between the two municipalities on other matters.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Heritage Canada Gets $12 Million Trust to Carry on Work

OTTAWA (CP) — The government created a $12-million national trust Monday, called Heritage Canada, to help save historic buildings and natural beauty spots which are part of the country's cultural roots.

The new nine-member board of governors held its inaugural meeting in the old privy council chamber of Parliament Hill's East Block a room in which cabinets met even before Confederation in 1867.

Jean Chretien, minister of Indian and northern affairs, handed the $12-million treasury cheque to Harland MacDougall, Toronto financier and chairman of the new board. Heritage Canada will live initially off the interest earned on the trust fund.

R. A. J. Phillips, former deputy head of Information Canada, is executive director of the new body. He said in an interview that Heritage Canada will work primarily as an information agency, encouraging conservation of historic and aesthetically important buildings and landscapes.

With its limited funds, it will not be ble to buy many properties. But as a national trust it can become owners or custodians of properties which it will rehabilitate, where necessary, and lease to public or private bodies. Its object will be to make money to further its work.

Heritage Canada was set up along similar lines to the National Trusts of England and Scotland, and the National Trust for Historic Preservation of the U.S. While two senior civil servants will serve on its board, it will be independent of the government both for day-to-day operations and long-range planning.

The new organization will sell memberships to the general public, but the annual fee is yet to be determined.

Phillips said Heritage Canada will not conflict with existing agencies such as the historic sites and monuments board and the national museums. Where appropriate, Heritage Canada will encourage the other agencies to take over historic properties.

It will act as a co-ordinating centre for provincial and local voluntary agencies trying to preserve historic sites.

WE LOVE YOU, KAREN: PIERRE

OTTAWA (CP) — "I think we have fallen in love with you again," said Prime Minister Trudeau, and Karen Magnussen cried.

The petite 20-year-old world figure skating champion was being honored Monday at a luncheon given by the Canadian Figure Skating Association.

Between sobs, the shy blonde from Vancouver beamed nervously as Mr. Trudeau presented her with an abstract Eskimo carving on behalf of the people of Canada.

He referred to her "courage and persistence" in winning the championship in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, after her sixth attempt.

"It's a wonderful honor you have brought to Canada . . . it's something that is reflected in all of us."

Miss Magnussen said that her win was unbelievable and she and her mother "still pinching ourselves to see if it's true."

Later she talked about her future saying she had a series of skating exhibitions to perform before the end of May, then a vacation was in order.

Mrs. Trudeau, in presenting Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Magnussen with a caricature drawing of their daughter, made a short speech and was congratulated by her husband before sitting down.

"That was a nice speech," he said shaking her hand to the laughter of the audience.

Anne Just Can't Stop Eating, Court Awards Her $150,000

LONDON (UPI) — A high court judge awarded Mrs. Ann Hawthorne and her husband $150,000 damages today after testimony that an accident turned her into a compulsive eater.

The court was told she had gained more than 100 pounds — from a svelte 133 pounds to a less svelte 238 pounds — after a 1969 car crash.

Her husband said Mrs. Hawthorne's brain was damaged, she walked unsteadily, was incapable of making judgements and could not stop eating.

WASHINGTON — Actress Jane Fonda was nominated for the "rottenest, most miserable performance by any one individual American in the history of our country" Monday by Rep. Robert Steele. Miss Fonda received the "nomination" in a floor speech by Steele for weekend remarks which characterized returning U.S. prisoners of war as "hypocrites and liars."

LONDON — President Luis Echeverria of Mexico arrived here by air today on a four-day state visit to Britain. Friday he will go to Belgium. A month-long world tour will later take him to France, the Soviet Union and China.

GENOA, Italy — Giovanni Pirelli, 54, leftist author and brother of Italian tire king Leopoldo Pirelli, died today of burns he suffered in an automobile accident with his brother three weeks ago. Leopoldo also was injured in the wreck but is reported out of danger.

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin said Monday night that recent developments toward a relaxation of east-west tension have "liberated the European continent from the shadows of the Cold War." Kosygin was speaking at a dinner given in his honor by Sweden's premier Olof Palme at the end of the first day of his official visit to Sweden.

TORONTO — Meyer Rush, the former stock promoter convicted of fraud in 1969, has been released after serving four years in prison. Rush, 50, survived a severe beating and a bombing before he was convicted of possessing $5,437 worth of cheques obtained by defrauding Americans through the sale of stock in the Panamanian companies. Rush refused to be interviewed, saying only that he wanted to be left alone.

LONDON — New York businessman Allen Klein, who took over the Beatles rock group in 1969, announced today he is cutting off his company from three former members of the group and the group's old recording firm, Apple. Paul McCartney split from John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr when Klein stepped in as business manager. A source close to the former Beatles said today, "nobody seems to know what happens now. Everything was all right on Friday."

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — While millions of Americans boycotted meat, President Nixon entertained South Vietnamese President Nguyn Van Thieu Monday at a dinner that featured roast prime tenderloin.

Music Festival Overflows Hall

The 1973 Greater Victoria Music Festival, which began Monday with activity at four centres, expanded into six halls today as classes got under way at 9 a.m.

Massive piano entries at all levels has resulted in two separate centres being established — for the seniors at Newcombe Auditorium and juniors at St. John's Hall.

By lunch break Monday, British adjudicator Clyde Lythgoe had already expressed his pleasure in the fine standard of piano performance at the senior level.

SIGHT-READING

He was also much impressed with the sight-reading ability of the majority of competitors, which he found superior to many other places where he has adjudicated.

(Piano competitors, in order to qualify for bursary prizes must enter comparable sight-reading classes.)

At Oak Bay Junior Secondary School, costumed dancers occupied the auditorium, performing ballet, national, tap, contemporary and jazz in the biggest representation ever from private studios.

This section which is being constructively adjudicated by Dolores Kirkwood of Vancouver, will continue through Wednesday, culminating in a ballet and dance honor performance at the school Wednesday.

NEXT WEEK

The schools folk dance honor performance is separate and will take place next Tuesday.

Bands and instrumental sessions began today at Victoria Senior Secondary auditorium. These will continue through Wednesday and Thursday, with the final session Thursday, moving to Central Junior auditorium.

Singers, from tiny boys and girls to adult operatic hopefuls, are performing in First United Church's main hall.

Three major solo classes took place Monday. The open sacred solo and male and female operatic.

Robin Powell won the sacred solo, with Judith Temple and Judith Johnson tied for runner-up position.

Randal Fisher of Cheney, Wash., topped the male operatic. Judith Temple won the female with "a professional performance" according to British adjudicator Roger Stalman of the coloratura mezzo aria from Barber of Seville, Una Voce Poca Fa.

SPEECH ARTS

Speech arts classes are housed in Fellowship Hall's room 119 — unfortunately devoid of a platform of any kind which sometimes quite seriously detracts from the dramatic aspect of this work.

For her performance of a Robinson Jeffers poem, adjudicator Gay Scrivener gave Rosalind Scott the highest mark she has awarded so far — an 87. She was also awarded first place in the dramatic monologue under 21 class for an excerpt from Christopher Fry's The Lady's Not for Burning.

There will be programs at all the centres tonight. At the two piano centres starting time is 7:30. All others are at 7.

HIGH LIVERS FACE $300 MONTHLY LIMIT

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (Reuter) — A new law came into effect Sunday aimed at ending high living for Sri Lanka's wealthiest citizens.

The law in effect puts a ceiling of $300 a month on disposable income for every individual or family, after insurance and housing loan payments, approved investments and deductions relating to the value of houses owned by them, and life insurance policies.

A tax official said 2,500 families would have to surrender their excess income to the government as a special compulsory savings levy.

The incomes of government ministers and members of Parliament will also be subject to the new law.

$3.9M BUDGET NOD FOR MALASPINA

DUNCAN — A $3,937,874 budget for 1973-74 has received final approval by Malaspina College council.

The budget includes $2,276,789 for academic, career and commercial service programs and $1,661,085 for the vocational division.

College president C. M. Opgaard told the college council the budget had been reviewed by the department of education and the college was congratulated for submitting a "very responsible budget."

Under the sharing system for community colleges the four participating district school boards will contribute 34 per cent or $687,525 of the operating budget, while the provincial government pays 66 per cent.

That will equal, said college bursar O. E. Neaves, a mill rate for local taxpayers of 1.87 compared to 1.81 last year.

At the same meeting, the council approved the appointment of four special consultants to work on plans for the new Malaspina College campus.

Victoria Housing Shortage 'By Fall'

A shortage of lower price housing and a consequent rise in prices was forecast Monday by house-building industry representative Chris Pike.

In remarks outside the Saanich council chamber, Pike said the "lower price range" of housing in the capital area had already gone to $32,000, a price beyond which average buyers cannot afford to go.

Pike was at the council meeting seeking support for a campaign to have the provincial freeze on undeveloped land lifted where there is no clear agricultural use.

Otherwise, he said, Victoria will face a housing shortage next fall.

Pike is a past president of Vicoria Home Builders' Association and is regional affairs director for the association in affiliation with the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

The association asked that all lots in sewered areas or within the Saanich sewer enterprise area which can pass as developable property be released from provincially-imposed restrictions to "ease the drastic price rise now taking place." Council tabled the request until its next meeting.

Pike said many builders at present have no work in Saanich or other municipalities, a situation "likely to produce quite a housing shortage by fall."

The association represents builders of detached and semi-detached houses in the capital, as distinct from apartment-builders.

Pike cited the case of property in the Tyndall-Torquay area of Gordon Head, which less than a year ago was tagged at $8,000, rose to $10,000 in the fall and $11,000 when the frreeze was imposed late in the year.

The price was then getting too high for single family residential purposes and the house builder who owned the lot listed it with a real estate agent. It sold within 24 hours for $12,500, Pike said.

The public can't take $4,500 increases in 8-10 months, Pike said.

"Builders are unprepared to erect more costly homes on speculation if they fall into the higher price range".

Some have just emerged from a period in which they have held houses unsold for two years because they were built on speculation for the higher price range. Others went bankrupt trying to hold out, Pike added.

The public can't afford houses on $15,000 lots, he said, calling the escalation the "death knell of the single family house in the lower price range."

The $28,000 house last fall is now the $32,000 house, and to improve on that will mean more duplexes and multiple family housing, Pike predicted,

Municipal planner Tom Loney said the amendments will hasten the release of urban lots from restrictions, but he could not predict when.

Hire Law Students

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Constable John Fisk says the Vancouver police force will hire five law students as special summer constables under a new federal assistance scheme. He said the students would wear uniforms and perform regular police duties but might not be armed.

Votes Tagged Absurd

Saanich aldermen Monday questioned the need of placing borrowing bylaws before ratepayers in view of a poor turnout Saturday for a $22.5 million hospital referendum.

But they were not unanimous in feeling that elected representatives should make such decisions, and agree to place the subject on the agenda of the annual meeting of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities.

Mayor Hugh Curtis referred to the "unsuitability" of placing the regional hospital bylaw before ratepayers when only 7.75 per cent of eligible Saanich voters cast a ballot.

What if the referendum had failed? wondered Ald. Edith Gunning.

ABSURD

"The government would have had to do something anyway and that points up the absurdity of the situation."

Curtis said the message he received was that, certainly, the voters want hospital improvements, but they want the elected representatives to make the financial decisions.

Ald. Frank Waring was concerned that spending should not be allowed to get too far away from the control of taxpayers. It was permissible, perhaps, for councils to make such decisions, but not the regional district (whose directors are not all elected).

PRESSURE

Curtis wondered what might have happened if a well-organized minority pressure group had successfully raised a red herring at the last minute, thereby defeating the referendum.

Ald. Alan Newberry said referendums force a council to be "just that much more careful when it knows the voter is going to be judging." That privilege should remain with the voter, he said.

Newberry and Ald. William Campbell opposed putting the subject on the AVIM agenda.

Two previously-approved subjects proposed by Saanich will be formal resolutions for the association to deliberate.

LANDSCAPING

One seeks legislation enabling councils to set landscaping standards for housing development; the other asks for safety standards controlling travelling shows, rides and amusements.

In other business, council approved the enforcement of a section of the Municipal Act enabling a municipality to remove abandoned cars from public property and charge the owner with the cost of pickup and storage.

Gov't Aware No Danger In Papers, Trial Told

LOS ANGELES (WP) — The jury in the Pentagon Papers case learned for the first time Monday that long before Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo Jr. went on trial, an intelligence expert from the National Security Agency advised the justice department that disclosure of the documents had not damaged the "national defence."

In a major breakthrough for the Ellsberg-Russo defence, U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne permitted the NSA official, William Gerhard, to read to the jury from studies of the Pentagon Papers that he prepared in late 1971 and early 1972.

A typical evaluation said that "disclosure of the information presented in this volume (part of the Pentagon Papers) would not have affected national defence interests as of 1969 or today."

That is a fundamental issue in this case.

The government must prove such injury to the national defence in order to convict Ellsberg and Russo of espionage in connection with their duplication of the documents while these were still classified in 1969.

Since Feb. 27, defence attorneys have presented a parade of witnesses to assert that disclosure of the documents could not possibly have hurt the United States or given advantage to a foreign power.

But that testimony, often repetitive and tedious, has come largely from former government officials or others with avowedly anti-war views.

DISCLOSURES PLAN RAPPED

The proposed provincial government's bill requiring public officials to disclose their financial holdings came under fire at Oak Bay council's meeting Monday.

Ald. John Goult called it an "insidious" bill and on his recommendation council voted to write the provincial government stating such information should only be made available through responsible officials — perhaps from the attorney-general's department — when valid reasons for doing so were given.

Council also stressed that holdings of spouses should not be required to be made public if his or her partner (the public official) did not handle them.

Ald. Brian Smith said "I'm afraid this bill is an attempt to make people appear to be like Caesar's wife rather than behave like Caesar's wife."

Goult said British legislation on the subject was much more realistic and advanced, the information on holdings only allowed to be made public for good cause.

"There must be reasonable cause," he said. "It prevents disclosure on whim."

Ald. Shirley Dowell agreed that "disclosure should be made by public officials but should be filed with the attorney-general's department."

Ald. Norman Pimlott felt the provincial government's suggestion "was fine but carried too far."

Rec Centre Loan Approved

Oak Bay council Monday finally adopted the loan bylaw for $766,667 from the federal government's winter capital projects fund, needed for Oak Bay's proposed $1.6 million recreation centre.

The bylaw was adopted after deputy municipal affairs minister W. K. Smith had approved the loan without a prior referendum.

In a letter Smith said a development competition, in his opinion, would be acceptable under the guidelines set down for provincial and federal grants, providing it was advertised.

Reminding council he had stated Jan. 5 that the lowest tender must be accepted unless otherwise approved by himself, Smith added:

"I would be prepared to approve other than the low bidder if the request was supported by adequate reasons to do so."

In other business, council passed bylaws defining boarding houses and boarders, rezoning five lots on Beach Drive back from apartment to single-family dwellings and rezoning the lot adjacent to Casey's grocery store on St. Patrick back from retail to single-family dwelling.

It also decided to hold a public hearing at 7:45 p.m. April 16 on two bylaws laying down regulations for landscaping over underground parking and a third which will stiffen requirements for apartment buildings in the areas on the north side of Cadboro Bay from Florence (except the Magnet Hardware) to Bowker and on the south side of Cadboro Bay from Cranmore (except the gas station) to Oak Bay Manor.

Council also approved:

—A bikathon to be held by the Fifth Camosun Scout Troop on May 27.

—A request by the Victoria Bowmen to use Henderson Park pavilion grounds for a regional tournament May 5 and 6.

A $99.60 grant towards the conference of the B.C. Association of Assessors, Sept. 19 to 21.

—A March for Music by the Victoria Conservatory of Music on May 12.

—That municipal administrator E. H. Hart and treasurer Ian Forster attend the annual conference of the Municipal Officers' Association of B.C. in Nelson May 30 to June 1.

Keep it clean.
Use Chevron Gasolines with F-310*

A dirty engine can cause many problems. That's why Chevron developed F-310*. In dirty engines F-310 goes to work immediately to remove harmful deposits from critical engine parts. And it helps keep clean engines clean. A clean engine is a more efficient engine, and that means better performance, more power and better mileage.

F-310 is not a substitute for regular engine servicing, but it will lower maintenance costs and add miles to the life of an engine. It can save wear and tear on the wallet, too. Chevron gasolines with F-310.

Singer to Sue On Drug Charge

LONDON (Reuter) — British pop star Englebert Humperdinck says he will seek an apology from the Venezuelan embassy here over his detention in Caracas on suspicion of possessing drugs.

Arriving back in London after his tour of the United States and Latin America, the singer said, of Venezuela: "I certainly don't advise anyone to go on vacation there."

Humperdink was in jail for more than three hours while Venezuelan officials carried out dope tests on a package of vitamin pills he was carrying.

He was released when the tests revealed the pills were not illegal drugs.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. reports sales of $56 million in 1972, up from sales of $23.1 million in 1971.

Net earnings after extraordinary items were $16,649,000 or $2.78 a share compared with earnings of $7,095,000 or $1.19 a share in 1971, the company said in its annual report.

The report, released by company chairman J. C. Simpson and president T. H. McClelland, said "the economic climate for the mining industry in B.C. has deteriorated since the beginning of the current year."

The company spent $6,233,000 on exploration in 1972. Of this total, 57 per cent was spent in Canada.

The report said working capital rose to $27 million in 1972 from $7 million the previous year.

Directors will propose at the annual meeting May 1 that the shares be split 2-for-1. Market price of the shares Dec. 2, 1971, was $25.50. Market price Monday was $52.

"World consumption of every major metal increased in 1972 owing to a substantial recovery from the depressed economic conditions of 1971," the report said.

"While the prices of some metals, notably zinc, silver and gold, increased, there were more than sufficient supplies of other metals including copper and molybdenum, available from new production and from surplus accumulated in 1970 and 1971 and prices for such metals remained low."

Burns Foods

Burns Foods Ltd. earned $3,729,686 or $1.47 a share during 1972, compared with $3,133,984 or $1.15 in the previous year.

Sales were $423,258,874, up from $359,300,748.

President A. J. E. Child said all divisions showed increased profit-making — meat packing was up 23.3 per cent, Scott National 12.8 per cent, Palm Dairies 13.2 per cent.

Sales figures in meat packing were increased by higher prices.

Although meat prices are rising, costs to farmers are also going up, he said, and unless the farmer gets an improved return he might not raise his production.

"In fact, he may in some cases cease farming altogether. With demand for food rising rapidly in this affluent country, lack of incentive to farmers will mean shortages and even higher prices."

Thomson Drilling

Thomson Drilling Co. Ltd. earned $264,835 or 30 cents a share during the three months ended Feb. 28 compared with $37,712 or five cents a share a year earlier.

The increase resulted mostly from lower drilling expenses.

Pato

Pato Consolidated Gold Dredging Ltd. reports earnings of $1,622,398 or 46 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1972, compared with $961,853 or 27 cents a share for the previous year.

Canada Share Value On Amex Up Sharply

NEW YORK (CP) — The total value of Canadian stocks traded on the American Stock Exchange jumped by a whopping $5 billion in 1972 to $16,330,177,709 from $11,261,412,930 in 1971.

At the same time, their percentage of the total market value of all stocks listed on the exchange rose to 29.34 from 22.41. Total value of all issues was $55,648,000,000.

The Amex traditionally has been the largest U.S. market for trading in foreign stocks and Canadian issues traditionally have been among the leaders in the foreign section.

Of the 68 foreign issues currently handled by the exchange, 50 are Canadian.

These 50 Canadian stocks at the end of 1972 constituted only 3.52 per cent of the exchange's 1,419 issues, but accounted for 4.10 per cent of all trading volume during the year.

Of the 1,117,979,153 shares which changed hands on the Amex, 45,818,420 were Canadian. In 1971, the 49 Canadian issues then listed accounted for 5.08 per cent of sale volume.

Three new Canadian issues were added to the exchange last year — Neonex International Ltd., Wainoco Oil Ltd., and Quebecor, Inc. Two Canadian stocks were dropped from the listings — Molybdenite Corp. of Canada Ltd., and Consolidated Canadian Faraday Ltd.

Two Canadian issues were among the exchange's top traders.

Calgary-based Asamera Oil was 11th in Amex volume with 6,157,500 shares traded.

Asamera was the individual volume leader in 1969 and 1970 and ranked fourth in 1971 with 9,794,300 shares.

An old-time favorite, Imperial Oil, ranked 12th in 1971 but slipped to 13th place in 1972 with 6,084,400 shares traded. Dome Petroleum was 72nd with 2,537,300 shares and Brascan was 91st with 2,410,500.

The Amex is undertaking a major program to attract more foreign listings, mostly from Europe and Japan. The program has been accelerated by the Nixon administration's recent proposal to abolish the 10-year-old interest equalization tax on foreign securities bought in the United States.

At present, a U.S. citizen purchasing shares of a foreign company from a foreign owner must pay a tax of 11.25 per cent of the purchase price to the U.S. government.

LOOKS TO CANADA

Bernard H. Maas, Amex vice-president who heads the securities division and specializes in non-U.S. securities, said Canadian companies would be one of the targets of the new campaign.

"We are interested in any good sound Canadian company," he said in an interview. "We have one Canadian company under consideration now and are exploring a couple of others."

Maas said the exchange offered Canadian companies constant exposure before the New York financial community and thus quick access to a pool of financing if they should need new capital in the future.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday to Friday at 388-3551. These hours to be kept to filing deadline, April 30. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. I am now receiving pension payments from the Canada Pension Plan. Is the money I receive taxable, and should I include it when I report my income?

A. Yes, the income you are now receiving from the Canada Pension Plan is taxable and should be reported on your income tax return.

Q. My wife and I were married in September. She was working before marriage but has not worked since. Can I claim the full married exemption of $1,350 for her? What does she do about filing a return?

A. If she received no income after your marriage, you may claim the full married exemption of $1,350. Otherwise, calculate your exemption taking into account only the income she received after your marriage. If your wife is taxable or had tax deducted from her salary, she must file her own return.

Q. My nephew, aged 15, came to live with me last year when his parents were killed in an auto accident. Although I have not been appointed as his legal guardian, and no papers have been signed, he is totally dependent on me. Can I claim him as a dependant on my income tax form?

A. Yes. The fact that you have not been appointed his legal guardian would not bar you from claiming your nephew as a dependant if he otherwise qualified.

Q. As an employer, I made the proper deductions for income tax, Canada Pension Plan and Unemployment Insurance, but I misplaced my remittance form PD7A. How should I make my remittance for the deductions?

A. Your remittance should be forwarded to the Taxation Data Centre, Ottawa, with your employer's number outlining the pay period covered and the breakdown of the applicable deductions.

Unappreciated, Nats Leave Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The Nationals of the World Hockey Association are finished with Ottawa — they won't even hold their playoffs here.

Doug Michel, team president, confirmed this late Monday although he was not certain where the playoffs would be held or where the team would be for the 1973-74 season.

The answers were expected to come from Buffalo, N.Y., and team owner Nick Trbovich today.

At the end of a very confusing day for fans and others interested, it appeared the team likely would settle in Toronto where the Maple Leaf Gardens and a group headed by John Bassett were competing for their favors.

On the outside looking in was the Ottawa city council, which spent the night debating its legal position in the whole thing, even though the city has no contract or agreement with the club.

At an impromptu news conference, Michel said he was almost certain the club would hold its playoffs in Maple Leaf Gardens, although those negotiations were not complete and there was no confirmation the team also would play there next year.

In Toronto, Gardens spokesman Bill Ballard was quoted as saying, "There's no way we want them for the playoffs without them playing here next season."

In the meantime John Bassett Jr., was in Buffalo trying to sell Trbovich the idea of moving the Nationals to the Canadian National Exhibition Coliseum, which Bassett and his father want to convert into a hockey arena to house the Nationals — or some other ailing WHA franchise — next season.

Although rumors had been rampant in the area for some time about just such a move, it came to a head Monday night with an announcement in city council by Mayor Pierre Benoit that the Nats were gone.

The city and the team have been feuding for some time over a $100,000 performance bond posted by the Nats with the Central Canada Exhibition Association, landlords of the 9,500-seat Civic Centre, home of the Nationals this season.

Due for renewal March 15, the Nationals refused to post the bond since the city is not renewing the CCEA lease for the exhibition grounds and the CCEA would be unable to fulfil the terms of a three-year deal it had with the team.

It was this dilemma that was being debated by city council Thursday when Mayor Benoit dropped his bomb.

Later, after many hours of questioning, Michel confirmed that whatever else happened the team would not be here next year and would be holding its playoff games elsewhere.

The move still needs league ratification. A league spokesman Monday said he had not heard anything about such a move and, in fact, had confirmed home playoff dates for Ottawa earlier in the day.

Wherever their home games are, the Nationals go into the eastern division semi-finals against New England Whalers starting April 7 and 8 in Boston. The series then moves to Nationals' territory — wherever — April 10 and 12 and then back to Boston April 14. Further games would be at the Nationals April 15 and at Boston April 19.

For the Nationals it's the culmination of a frustrating season.

Even though they made the final playoff berth with a dramatic late-season rush that included 12 wins in 13 outings and nine straight victories at home, they never caught on with the fans.

In the first half of the season when they were floundering near or in the division cellar, the team was drawing an average of 2,000 fans a game when it needed about 4,500 just to break even.

Even in the rush for a playoff berth when it was in a deadly struggle with Philadelphia Blazers and Quebec Les Nordiques, the club could draw only about 4,000-5,000 fans.

Just once all year did it sell out—March 6 when Winnipeg Jets and Bobby Hull filled the Civic Centre to overflowing.

The Nationals' home-ice situation was not the only uncertainty in the WHA playoff picture. Still in doubt is who will meet Winnipeg Jets in the West Division.

Alberta Oilers and Minnesota Fighting Saints finished tied for fourth in the West and it was decided a sudden-death playoff game will be held to determine which team advances against the Jets.

The Oilers announced Monday they will meet the Saints Wednesday in Calgary. The winner starts the best-of-seven quarter-final Friday in Winnipeg.

Other quarter-finals see Philadelphia Blazers opening against the Crusaders in Cleveland Wednesday and Los Angeles Sharks going against the Aeros in Houston starting Thursday.

Fans Fight For Tickets In Philly

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — There's a lot more to the Flyers than being Philadelphia's favorite wrecking crew. Brash, loose, and hungry, they are the product of a skilfully-organized campaign to win the Stanley Cup.

"It may not happen this year, but we will win the Stanley Cup," says Ed Snider, the ruddy-cheeked mod boss of the Flyers. Snider owns 60 per cent of the National Hockey League franchise.

But Cup fever gripped Philadelphia as never before Monday morning as thousands of fans fought for playoff tickets at the Spectrum, home of the Flyers. Dozens of police had trouble keeping order as 2,000 remaining tickets were sold out in half an hour.

The Flyers broke 35 club records while finishing second in the West Division of the National Hockey League and meet Minnesota North Stars in the first game of the quarter-final playoffs at home Wednesday night.

The Flyers are one of the youngest teams in the NHL with six rookies in the lineup against the older and more experienced North Stars. But both clubs have their hitters, although no one has been able to match the Flyers in penalties.

The Flyers average 24 years of age and won the season series from the North Stars 3-2. And Philadelphia is the only team in the league to hold the favored Montreal Canadiens even with a 2-2-1 mark.

They'd Lie for Each Other

"I've been blessed with a lot of good hockey teams, but this is the best team I've ever coached," says coach Fred Shero of the Flyers.

"The players not only fought for each other on the ice, but they stood up for each other off the ice. They'd even lie to protect a team-mate. I like that. Everyone pulling for everyone else."

The other three best-of-seven quarter-final playoffs series also open Wednesday night with Buffalo Sabres against the Canadiens at Montreal, New York Rangers against the Bruins at Boston and St. Louis at Chicago against the Black Hawks.

Second games in all series are at the same sites Thursday and third and fourth games are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at Minnesota, Buffalo, New York and St. Louis.

Shero says the Flyers won't change their big hitting game for the playoffs. In the regular season Philadelphia set an NHL record of 1,754 minutes in penalties, an average of 22.4 minutes a game.

They were shorthanded 359 times and had 69 goals scored against them on the power play, tops in the league.

But the Flyers also have the best power play going, having scored 74 times.

"We've got young players, tough players and that's the way we're going to play it," says Bobby Clarke, runner-up in the NHL scoring race with 37 goals and 67 assists for 104 points.

Clarke and Rick MacLeish are the first centres on the same team to score 100 points in a single season in NHL history.

MacLeish Is In for a Raise

MacLeish got his 50th goal and 100th point on the final night of the season Sunday, and owner Snider called it the "most remarkable over-all performance in NHL history."

MacLeish was almost dropped from the team after he showed nothing early in the season. He had scored only one goal for the Flyers in 17 games last season before going to the minors. This year he led the NHL in power-play goals with 21.

Rick, who has been drawing bonuses ever since he scored his first 20 goals this season, has been promised a raise in his three-year contract. Clarke has a five-year contract calling for $100,000 a year.

Snider says he has no fear of any of his players jumping to the rival World Hockey Association.

"Our entire roster except one player already is signed up," he says.

Except for (Cowboy) Bill Flett, the ex-rodeo performer who scored 43 goals, the Flyers are in good shape. Flett is nursing a painful bruised hip but is expected to play on one of the Flyers' two main lines—with Clarke and Billy Barber, rookie-of-the-year candidate who scored 30 goals.

HEAVYWEIGHT FIGHTER Ken Norton chats with Muhammad Ali in San Diego hospital where Ali has been treated for broken jaw since their fight Saturday. Norton won 12-round split decision over Ali.

Ali's Jaw Wired, But Not for Usual Sounds

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Muhammad Ali was expected to leave hospital today but will eat nothing but liquids for six weeks because of a broken jaw, doctors said.

The former heavyweight champion was injured Saturday in an upset loss to Ken Norton of San Diego. Ali, 31, underwent a 1½-hour operation Saturday night.

Dr. William Lundeen, the state athletic commission physician who has supervised Ali's treatment, described the injury as a compound fracture of the lower left jawbone between the second and third molars. He wouldn't speculate on what kind of blow had caused the fracture.

"His jaw will be wired for six weeks and he'll have no contact work for six weeks after that," Lundeen said. "He might be ready to fight then or it could be another three months."

He said the injury shouldn't bother Ali once it heals and shouldn't happen again in the same spot. "For some reason, people don't break their jaws in the same place twice," the doctor said.

Ali isn't in pain but will have discomfort because of the wires on his jaws and teeth, Lundeen said. "He can only open his mouth a little bit, to let liquids in, and talks without moving his lower jaw," he said.

Dr. Gary Manchester, who performed the operation, described the injury as "a very bad break" and extremely painful.

"The bone which was broken had three or four jagged edges," he said. "The edges kept poking into his cheek and into his mouth."

Norton visited Ali Sunday and the former champion congratulated him. A photographer at the scene quoted Ali as saying: "I was pretty brave to fight like that. I had pain with every punch I threw."

Chi Chi Champ, Also a Realist

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez has no illusions about extending his winning streak to two with a victory in the famed Masters tournament this week.

"Jack Nicklaus will be there," Chi Chi explained.

"When Jack takes a week off (as he did in the Greater Greensboro Open) it's anybody's tournament," Rodriguez said Monday after his one-stroke victory over Lou Graham and Ken Still.

"But Augusta National (the site of the Masters) was made for Jack Nicklaus and Jack Nicklaus was made for Augusta National."

The 37-year-old Rodriguez' down to a wiry 120 pounds because of a diet he "hopes will help me live to be 140 years old," came from two strokes off the pace with a five-under-par 66 in the rain-delayed final round and picked up $42,000 for his seventh tour triumph in 14 years on the pro tour.

FINISHED 17 UNDER

He had a 72-hole total of 267, 17 under par on the 7,021-yard Sedgfield Country Club course. Graham, who had a final 69, was one stroke away for the third week in a row. He tied at 268 with Still, who bolted into contention with a last-round 64 that included 11 one-putt greens.

Rodriguez and the rest of the field that is eligible for the Masters were delayed one day in getting to Augusta, Ga., where Nicklaus has been practising for a week for the tournament which starts Thursday.

Saturday's round here was washed out by a 1.5-inch rain. A double round of 36 holes was scheduled for Sunday, but only half of it could be played and the final round was held over until Monday.

George Knudson of Toronto fired a par 71 and picked up $3,937 for his 12th-place finish. He had rounds of 68, 66, 69 and Monday's 71 for a 274 total.

Ben Kern of Toronto fired a four-under 67 for a 278 total. He won $1,189.

Rodriguez started the final round two strokes back of co-leaders Graham and Billy Casper. Casper and Graham both encountered trouble on the front nine, despite rules that allowed all players to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairway and through the green, and Chi Chi stormed past them on a string of three consecutive birdies starting on the seventh hole.

Behind Graham and Still came Casper and veteran Gay Brewer, tied at 270.

Bobby Nichols finished at 271 with Doug Sanders, Rod Funseth and Lee Elder at 272. Elder needed to win to become the first black player to compete in the Masters. He once got within one stroke on the mild, windy final day, but finished with a 68 and so missed his chance at qualifying.

OWNERS DISCUSS NHL-WHA MERGER

MONTREAL (CP) — Officials of the National Hockey League and the rival World Hockey Association met in New York last Sunday to consider a possible merger of the two leagues, it was learned today.

Radio reports here and in Toronto indicated that Bill Jennings, president of the NHL New York Rangers, and Ben Hatskin, owner of the WHA Winnipeg Jets, were the principals concerned in the meeting.

NHL President Clarence Campbell said that while he was aware of the meeting, it had no official status as far as the NHL is concerned.

"I was aware such a meeting could take place," Campbell said. "But as it has no official league status, any comment on the subject will have to come from the people who took part in it."

It is believed one area of concern to both sides that was discussed concerned soaring player salaries, which have swelled for both sides since the inception of the new league.

Alan Eagleson, the lawyer who acts as executive-director of the NHL Players' Association, has scheduled a news conference in Toronto for later today. It was expected the joint league talks, and thus the lessening of player bargaining power which would come about through a merger, would be the main topic of discussion.

Spartans Seek Another Cup

Claremont Spartans will be trying to win the Howard Russell Cup for the fifth year in a row when they take on Victoria Titans at 8 p.m. Friday at Royal Athletic Park.

Spartans, coached by Ed Kubek, cruised into the Victoria High School Rugby League playoff final by trouncing Reynolds Roadrunners 49-3 at Claremont Monday. Last week, the Spartans clinched the league title for the fifth straight season.

Titans, who are coached by Tillman Briggs, got all their points from standoff-half Tony Flynn to defeat Oak Bay Bays 9-3 in Monday's other sudden-death semi-final at Vic High.

Flynn kicked a penalty goal and Brent Huggins of Oak Bay was also successful on a penalty shot to leave the schools tied 3-3 at half time. Early in the second half, Flynn scored the winning points when he made a fine break and beat three defenders to score under the posts. He also kicked the conversion.

Claremont led Roadrunners, who finished fourth in the league, by only 9-3 at half time but turned on the pressure in the second half.

Mark Ruthven and Bard Waugh scored two tries each and Claremont's other try scorers were Tom Elwell, Mike Bernard, Darrell Schumaker, Bruce Graham and Dave Robbins. Dave Chambers booted three conversions and a penalty goal and Elwell kicked two conversions. Bill Beicher got a penalty goal for Reynolds.

Tennis Wave Swamping Victoria

By MAX LOW

Times Staff

For years, two men have run the Greater Victoria tennis instruction program almost 'double-handed."

Now, as Victoria is swamped by the wave of popularity the sport is enjoying throughout North America, Gordon Hartley and Howard Tooby know they are going to need help.

And so a special program, amalgamating the programs carried out by the city and three municipalities over the past 10 years, will be launched to train a team of eight to 10 assistant coaches for the summer.

The assistants will be trained by Hartley and Tooby at Henderson Park from April 7 to 22 and all applicants will be required to pass both practical and written examinations set by the B.C. Lawn Tennis Association before being certified.

Tooby will then be responsible for organizing the junior and adult programs in Oak Bay during May and June. Hartley will run the Esquimalt, saanich and Victoria programs, with adult instruction being given in evenings in May and June and junior lessons given during daytime sessions in July and August.

Full details on registrations, fees and programs are expected to be announced in mid-April but already Tooby is forecasting there will be the biggest turnout ever for such a program in the city.

Purpose of the scheme to train assistant coaches is two-fold, Tooby said monday.

"One aim is to make sure all coaching in the municipalities is on a par and that everyone is coaching in the same way," he said. "And the other aim is to have enough certified instructors to take over from Gordon and me when we give up coaching.

"The whole thing is bound to help tennis greatly here," Tooby added.

Some of the congestion experienced on the area's existing public courts in recent years will be relieved this summer with the construction of at least seven new playing surfaces and the provision of several "practice" courts.

Four new courts will be located at the Gordon Head Recreational Centre and should be ready for use in mid-June. The other three will be completed this month at Victoria's Stadacona Park, where three of the old six grass courts have been blacktopped.

It is also planned to construct four "practice" courts, similar to ones in use in southern California where parking lots on university campuses are converted for tennis in the evenings and on weekends.

These temporary convertible courts are to be built on a parking lot near Royal Athletic Park.

Cliff Bate, city parks director, estimates the cost of the four courts at about $6,500 compared with about $24,000 it would take to provide four new tournament-standard courts.

Rumors Galore Don't Upset Leafs' Chief

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Gregory says he is not worrying about continuing rumors that he and Johnny McLellan will be replaced as general manager and coach, respectively, with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs wound up the season Sunday in sixth place in the National Hockey League East Division. Their 41 losses in 78 games was the most the club has ever suffered in one season.

"I've heard all the rumors," Gregory said Monday.

"I don't imagine anything has been done — so far. At least I haven't heard. I doubt if anything would be done before the draft in June."

Gregory and McLellan were appointed to their Leaf posts in 1969, replacing Punch Imlach who was fired.

The most prevalent reports recently suggest Red Kelly, fired in mid-season as coach of Pittsburgh Penguins, may assume both coaching and general manager posts with the Leafs.

Lack of Conservatism Explains Turyk's Run

If today was April 1, I wouldn't have dared mention it. This being April 3, I'll say it and trust all good neighbors will believe it:

Mike Turyk has scored another hole-in-one!

There's a lot of play in this one, the 17th since the Victoria Golf Club member took up golf 12 years ago. Numerologists would make something out of it because it was No. 7 on Oak Bay's 7th hole. Astrologists would put greater emphasis on the fact it happened Saturday, which was the day Mike celebrated his 54th birthday.

It is an incredible streak, especially since Turyk, by his own admission, is "not a good golfer." He has a handicap of 16, has never been better than 14.

Saturday's ace put Turyk one up on Dr. George Bigelow, the former Canadian seniors' titleholder, who had to play the game 45 years in order to get to 16.

Turyk scored his 16th on March 21, then came through with the tie-breaker 10 days later. He scored an ace the very first time he played an 18-hole round, and once counted aces on three successive trips to the same hole.

A vast majority of golfers find his record incredible. It is. But if there is a reason for his continuing good fortune on the golf course, it comes with Turyk's philosophy on how to play the game.

"Even though I am not a good golfer," Mike said Monday, "I always shoot for the hole, and I always make sure I over-club rather than under-club.

"You know pins often are tucked in behind traps. Good golfers invariably shoot for the fat (safe) part of the green. I don't. I play for the hole.

"That's why I have either good holes or some bad ones. I may wind up in the trap or in trouble, but at least I tried to get the ball into the hole.

"Sunday I had two birdies, six pars and a lot of bad holes for an 87. Two birds and six pars isn't too bad for a 16 handicapper and I know I can improve my handicap if I played a more conservative game.

"But hitting for the fat part of the green, playing safe, and saying 'I'll play for a par here' isn't my game.

"The other thing I always do is to pick enough club. If the choice is between a four or five iron, I'll pick the four. That way, I figure I'm going to be up to the hole. Invariably I'm putting back, but rarely up to the hole from in front of the green."

Basic reasoning, but it helps explain the reason for Turyk's amazing success.

★ ★ ★

Now teaching at Claremont and Camosun College, Turyk was an ardent fisherman and in business with former Colwood executive Don Ross when he took up golf.

"I got tired of hearing about all those weekend golf games every Monday morning. Don sold me a complete set of clubs, bag and all.

"The very first game I played was at Uplands. (Colwood pro) Bill Court didn't think I should try and play without getting some instruction, and he gave me a half-hour's lesson. I remember most of the time was spent with the three wood."

Then it was on to Uplands. "It was rather awful. I really hacked my way around until we got to the 11th hole. It looked like the three-wood distance I remembered from the lesson with Court. I teed it up very high, and hit the ball a mile into the air. I never did see it land," said Turyk.

Uplands member Fred Francis, playing to the first green, did.

"Was that your first shot?" Fred asked. "Well, it's in the cup."

★ ★ ★

More astounding was Turyk's success, a few years back, on the seventh at Victoria Club. One of Turyk's regular playing partners was stockbroker Bert Kennedy.

Turyk mis-hit his first drive while playing off the seventh one early spring. The ball glanced off a bench near the ladies' tee, then caromed off into "wild country." Turyk hit a second ball. It went into the hole for par three.

Three days later, on a Saturday, Turyk's group was back on the seventh tee. Kennedy brought out a new ball and offered it to Turyk with the comment "I've got a lot of confidence in you Mike."

New balls, you must realize, are not used very often on Oak Bay's seventh. The average golfer would prefer to take his chances with a used ball rather than drop a new one into the bay that borders the seventh green.

Turyk accepted Kennedy's offering, then promptly smacked it into the cup.

Turyk made it three-for-three off the same tee on the following Wednesday.

"Have you got the ball you used Saturday?" Kennedy asked. Mike replied in the affirmative, went searching into his bag, brought out the hole-in-one ball and teed it.

Again it went into the cup.

★ ★ ★

For all his success—three aces at Uplands and 14 at Oak Bay — Mike has never taken out hole-in-one insurance except at his home club.

This week, however, Turyk's made up his mind.

"I think it's about time I joined one of those hole-in-one clubs that offer you a free trip to Europe."

Do that, Mike, and be sure to send us a postcard from Paris.

Top Spot Still Belongs to Flying Phil

MONTREAL (CP) — Two players who provided much of the centre ice strength for Team Canada in their historic series against the Soviet Union last fall, have finished one-two in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins captured the title with a 26-point edge over Bobby Clarke, the 23-year-old captain of Philadelphia Flyers. Esposito finished with 55 goals and 75 assists as he played in all of his club's 78 games while Clarke had 104 points on 37 goals and 67 assists.

Esposito, who has won the NHL's scoring title the past three seasons and four of the last five, collects a total of $2,000 — $1,000 as winner of the Art Ross Trophy and $1,000 for leading the scoring in each half of the season.

Clarke receives $1,000 as over-all runner-up while the Bruins' Orr gets $250 as runner-up to Esposito in the second half.

Orr, the Bruins' offensive-minded defenceman, missed 15 games this year with an aching knee, but still managed a third-place finish scoring 101 points, one more than sophomore Rick McLeish of Philadelphia. Orr had 29 goals and 72 assists while McLeish, who had only 17 goals in his initial NHL campaign, had 50 goals and an equal number of assists.

Montreal Canadiens' centre Jacques Lemaire finished in fifth spot with 44 goals and 51 assists for 95 points and won $250 for being the runner-up to Esposito in the first half.

Detroit's Mickey Redmond finished with 52 goals, second only to Esposito, and with his output the Red Wings' right winger established an NHL record for most goals by a right winger in a season. The previous mark of 50 was held jointly by Maurice Richard and Bernard Geoffrion, both former Canadiens.

Ken Dryden of the Canadiens and Roy Edwards of Detroit led the goalkeepers with shutouts — six, while Dryden and teammates Michel Plasse and Wayne Thomas combined to give Montreal the lowest goals against average to win the Vezina Trophy. The Canadiens' netminding trio allowed 184 goals for an average of 2.36.

New York Rangers were second with a 2.67 goals against average, as Ed Giacomin, Gilles Villemure and Peter McDuffe allowed a total of 208 goals.

Philadelphia set a league record with 1,754 minutes in penalties while Flyers' Dave Schultz was the NHL's most penalized individual, spending 259 minutes in the penalty box.

PENTICTON (CP) — Penticton Broncos continued their winning ways in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League playoffs as they set down Chilliwack Bruins 4-2 Monday to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven league finals.

Penticton grabbed a 1-0 lead in the opening period, moved to a 4-1 advantage after two and held Chilliwack to a single goal in the third.

Bob Nicholson counted two goals for the Broncos with Mike Hiefield and Chad Campbell adding the others. Chilliwack scorers were Fran Thiessen and Stu Spence.

Penticton took five of the eight minor penalties called. Chilliwack held a narrow 26-25 edge in the shots on goal.

Calgary Site Of Extra Game

Times News Services

A sudden-death game will be played in Calgary Wednesday night between Alberta Oilers and Minnesota Fighting Saints to decide the fourth and last playoff spot in the World Hockey Association's west division.

The teams ended the season with identical records of 39 wins, 37 losses and three ties for 79 points.

Announcement of the venue and date of the tie-breaking contest was made by Edmonton general manager Bill Hunter after his players had voted to play the game.

Oilers had thought they had the playoff spot locked up after defeating Minnesota 5-3 Friday at St. Paul on the basis of a better won-loss record against other teams in their own division.

Hunter said his players voted to go through with the sudden-death game despite their disappointment over the league's ruling that there must be one.

"We still think it's a bad deal but we accept the league's decision," he said. "And we'll do it the hard way."

The winner will play Winnipeg Jets, first-place finishers in the western division, with the first game of their best-of-seven quarter-final playoffs starting Friday in Winnipeg.

Oiler winger Billy Hicke, president of the WHA Players Association, said there could have been a league players' strike over the issue. But he recommended that Oilers vote to play the sudden-death game for the good of the league.

During the weekend, the WHA Players' Association representatives from the 10 teams not involved in the dispute unanimously voted to back whatever decision the Oiler players arrived at.

". . . The entire WHA Players' Association would strike over the league decision for another game," Hicke said before his team's vote, "but this would be a bad blow for the WHA and we don't want to take any action that will harm the league.

"We feel this mixup occurred because the league office goofed. However, we realize we are dealing with a green league office and mistakes can happen.

"Legally the Saints have a point, but from the players' standpoint, the league is morally wrong to order another game because both teams knew the game in Minnesota Friday would decide who got the playoff position and we won it."

Meanwhile, league headquarters have confirmed that Andre Lacroix is the first WHA scoring champion. The 27-year-old Philadelphia Blazer centre, who scored only 11 points in 51 National League games with Chicago Black Hawks last season, wound up with 50 goals and 74 assists for 124 points.

WALTERS ACQUITTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lyman Walters, vice-president of the firm that owns the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, was acquitted Monday on a charge of issuing a false prospectus in the fall of 1970 with the intent to induce the public to buy shares in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd.

The British Columbia Supreme Court jury returned the verdict after being told by Mr. Justice Harry McKay that there was no evidence on which they could reasonably bring in a finding of guilty.

The judge directed the jury to acquit Walters, vice-president of Medical Investment Corp. (Medicor) of Minneapolis and its Northwest Sports subsidiary, following a motion by defence counsel Allan McEachern.

Walters, wearing a blue blazer with a Canucks' badge on his lapel, shook hands with all three defence lawyers at the trial and kissed a young woman assisting in his case.

CHARGED JOINTLY

The trial of Tom Scallen, president of both Medicor and Northwest, who was charged jointly with Walters, continues today.

Scallen is also charged with theft of $3 million by converting money belonging to Northwest Sports to the use of Medicor.

In earlier testimony Monday, industrialist Frank McMahon said that the chance of the team's becoming a financial success when it entered the NHL for the 1970-71 season was about as good as that of a mule winning the Kentucky Derby.

McMahon has owned one derby winner.

McMahon said he took no active part in the affairs of Northwest Sports in 1970, although he was on the board of directors.

He said he had no knowledge of a transaction in which the prosecution alleges the $3 million was converted for Medicor's use and did not authorize the transaction in any way.

McMahon, a Vancouver millionaire, said he attended no directors' meetings in 1970, although he was active in the company before then.

DID NOT HELP

He also said he did not participate in negotiations leading to an offering of Northwest Sports shares to the public in late 1970 and had nothing to do with the preparation of a prospectus for the share offering.

He said he first learned of the $3 million transaction in April or May of 1971.

Under cross-examination by Peter Butler, defence counsel for Walters, McMahon said the $9 million paid for the Canucks to get into the NHL might never be recovered.

The crown concluded its case with the reading of testimony from a preliminary hearing into the charges by Coleman E. Hall, another Northwest Sports director.

Hall is now recuperating from a back operation in Hawaii.

Councillors Grudgingly Cut Budget

Camosun College councillors Monday agreed grudgingly to reduce the 1973-74 college budget to $4,084,316.

The councillors were informed by college principal Grant Fisher that the department of education had instructed them to slash the vocational portion of their original $4,254,980 budget by $200,000.

They decided instead to resubmit the budget with only $170,664 in reductions and hope the department would accept it.

The total budget as approved for re-submission represents $2,497,306 for non-vocational programs and $1,587,010 for vocational programs.

Greater Victoria School District's share of the budget is $391,157, which means the cost to the local taxpayer will be about .91 mills—up from .79 mills last year.

The remainder of the budget is paid by the provincial and federal governments, by revenue from tuition fees and services and by budget surplus from last year.

More than half the budget cuts agreed to by the councillors involve cancelling additional staff intended to teach new vocational courses.

One of the new courses which cannot be funded within this budget is the dental assistant program.

Fisher explained, however, that some new courses might still be offered if funding can be obtained from other sources, including other provincial agencies and the federal department of manpower.

He said the department requested the budget cut because the total budget of all provincial colleges was $3 million higher than the government had budgeted for.

Two other areas reduced in the vocational budget were the community services portion (which Fisher said might be compensated by increasing the revenue accruing to the night school division) and the salaries and fringe benefits portion.

The $28,200 cut in salaries and benefits will be met by reducing the staff salary increase for 1973-74 to seven per cent, instead of 10 per cent.

Fisher said the department agreed to pay the difference if salary increases turn out to be higher than the budget forecast.

Another $14,800 was pared from the amount budgetted for training materials.

Director of trades and industrial training at the college, John Drysdale, said he didn't know if the reductions "hit like lightning or a heavy hammer.

"It won't be easy now, certainly not," he said. "but we'll just have to get by."

City College May Start Its Own Day Care Centre

Day-care facilities will likely soon be established at Camosun College.

The college council agreed Monday to set up a committee to assess the needs and determine the feasibility of establishing a day-care centre at the college.

★ ★ ★

The motion was first submitted by councillor Gerry Tromp who said day-care services would allow many mothers to further their education and would provide a community service "in line with the philosophy of a community college."

She said she worked at a day-care facility where many students brought their children but she thought a centre at Camosun would be more beneficial and perhaps lead to the development of a child study centre.

College principal Grant Fisher said some studies had been done at the school last year on the need for day-care services.

"At that time we discovered people attending the college then wouldn't use the facility," Fisher said. "They preferred to use day-care centres close to their homes.

★ ★ ★

"We also discovered day-care facilities at UVic were working at half capacity, so we decided those who wanted day-care should use the UVic facility."

The councillors agreed that while they couldn't go ahead with Tromp's concrete proposal for establishing a centre, a committee should be set up to assess the present need for day-care at the college.

SFU Food Outlets Picketed In Protest Over Prices

VANCOUVER (CP) — Students at Simon Fraser University threw up picket lines at three of the university's five food outlets Monday to protest high food prices.

Student spokesman Bill Birge said the boycott was instituted because a recent price increase was applied more heavily to lower-cost items such as hamburgers and hot dogs than higher-priced meals.

George Stuart, the university's vice-president of administration, said the price boost was needed to reduce a deficit in food services. He said a $60,000 deficit is estimated for the financial year ending April 30.

Stuart said next year's deficit, even with the price increases, will still be $40,000.

Birge said the boycott is very successfull and picketing will be expanded today to include all five food outlets.

Trustees Protest

PENTICTON (CP) — The Penticton district school board voted Monday to ask the British Columbia School Trustees Association to make protest to the provincial government against the proposed offical disclosure bill, which would require all persons holding public office to reveal business interests they or other members of their immediate family had.

Engineer Fired

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian National Railways has dismissed a second employee in the continuing dispute between the railway and members of the United Transportation Union.

Lorne Vandevoord, an engineer with the CNR for 21 years, was dismissed after a company investigation gave him 30 demerit points for falsifying a time sheet.

The 30 points gave Vandevoord more than 60, the allowable limit for operating employees.

Mine Walkout

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Workers on the afternoon shift at Cominco Ltd.'s Sullivan Mine operations here joined a walkout begun in the day shift Monday to protest what they claimed were dangerous gas levels in the mine.

The men walked off the job at the lead-zinc mine, claiming levels of sulphur dioxide in the mine were 200 times above recommended levels.

Shooter Sought

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Police Monday were looking for a man who shot Deborah Robertson, 16, when she refused his offer on a ride. She said the man was about 26 years old, of medium build, with curly brown hair and long sideburns. Miss Robertson was still in hospital Monday recovering from surgery to remove the bullet.

Smoking Allowed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver school board voted Monday to allow grade 11 and 12 students at Eric Hamber Secondary to smoke on school grounds during a one-month trial period. Board members said they realized smoking was a health hazard, but said it is also part of student life. The proposal originated with the school's student council.

More Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police records for March reveal 256 drinking driving charges were laid and 478 motorists were given 24-hour suspensions. By the end of March, 1,937 motorists had come into contact with police on drinking offences in 1973, compared with 960 in the first three months of 1972.

Two File

LANGLEY (CP) — J. H. Yonder, 56, an insurance agent, and Aubrey Searle, 37, a B.C. Hydro sales representative, Monday filed nomination papers for an aldermanic byelection here April 14 to replace Social Credit MLA Bob McLelland, who resigned as alderman last month.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 27-year-old Hawaii man who told Victoria provincial court Monday he had been given some marijuana by a motorist for fixing the man's tire was fined $75 by Judge William Ostler.

Charles Lewis Best was a passenger in a car that was stopped Saturday night on Douglas.

During a police search, a small quantity of marijuana was found in his pocket. The man admitted ownership and knowledge of the drug, but said it had been given to him by another person whose flat tire he had repaired.

A 19-year-old man who pleaded guilty to possession of cannabis sativa was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation.

Timothy Wayne Engstrom, of no fixed address, ran from police officers who stopped him on Douglas early Saturday.

A piece of tinfoil, containing 25 marijuana seeds, was found in his pocket.

Mark Christopher Shore, 18, of 927 Collinson, was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Shore was searched in Victoria police headquarters on another matter when a marijuana joint was found in his shirt pocket.

A 19-year-old woman who tried to get a refund on a Woolco sweater she admitted she thought "might be stolen" was given a suspended sentence and placed on nine months' probation for possession under $200.

Barbara Wendy Reynolds, 1465 Edgeware admitted trying to get a refund on the $14.95 sweater March 24. She told Woolco security staff she got the sweater from a friend, later admitting she suspected it might have been stolen.

In traffic court, two men were each fined $350 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Simon Faulkner, 20, of 3422 Calumet, was stopped Saturday night and Stephen Anthony Carter, 19, of 2880 Lansdowne, was stopped Friday night.

Neil David Weaver, 19, of 7-1830 Old Island Highway, was fined $350 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content of over .08. Weaver had been stopped late Friday.

Robert J. Bourgeois, 23, of 102-535 Niagara, pleaded guilty Saturday to indecent assault on a female.

He was remanded until April 10 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

The court was told Bourgeois picked up a 23-year-old woman hitch-hiking on Fort Street and drove to the 900 block St. Charles Street where he stopped his car and assaulted her.

She managed to open the door of the car and escape. Later she identified the accused in a police line-up.

In Sidney provincial court Monday, a 41-year-old Sidney man, charged with impaired driving and criminal negligence causing death, was committed for trial in a higher court after a preliminary hearing before Judge D. G. Ashby.

Klaus Herman Hinzo 2178 Mills, was charged following the death of Durwood Warren Freidrich, 15, of 2075 Weiler, Sidney, killed while walking on the Pat Bay Highway between Beacon and Weiler Feb. 2.

An inquest into the death was waived after a decision to lay the charges was made, Sidney RCMP said.

Oak Bay Council To Send Amorous Sea Lions Under Cover

Spring fever and the vocalizing that accompanies it among sea lions will bring changes at Oak Bay Marina's Sealand.

Oak Bay council Monday gave Sealand president Bob Wright permission to build a covered pool for the Steller sea lion, Benjamin, which will be placed between the present sea lions' pool and the whale pool, which will be extended 24 feet north.

Approval was given despite vigorous opposition by Ald. Douglas McLelland.

Wright told council he wanted to build the pool as a "good neighbor gesture" to nearby residents who might be disturbed by the California sea lions who "like the birds and bees will turn to amorous thoughts, which will surely make them more vocal."

McLelland said building the new pool was like "putting a band-aid on" the noise pollution problem and suggested the original agreement drawn up between the marina and council did not include Sealand.

Wright said this was not so and that a bylaw had also been drafted between his company and council.

The development north of the present whale pool he said, was well within foreshore rights.

He reminded McLelland that at McLelland's insistence he had agreed to give up any rights of developing outside his present foreshore leases when council approved the extension of the marina's breakwater.

Ald. Brian Smith said, "This so-called addition to the marina, as I see it, is obviously designed to prevent noise pollution. Rather than ham-stringing Mr. Wright, I would like to encourage him."

Ald. John Goult praised Wright for his "good neighbor policy."

McLelland was the only alderman to vote against approval of the sea lion pool, which will be built before the mating season gets in full swing.

Inter-Island Council Proposed

An inter-island council may be needed as the vehicle for exchanging information and ideas among residents of all the Gulf Islands, Hugh Curtis (PC — Saanich and The Islands) told the legislature's standing committee on municipal matters today.

His comment arose out of a complaint by Denman island resident Robin Newton that there is little real communication between the islands and therefore little opportunity for Denman Islanders to find out what the legislature's committee is attempting to do and what other communities have already done in terms of protecting and preserving their own environment.

After Peter Rolston (NDP — Dewdney) told Newton that part of the problem he mentioned was "you are too isolated," Curtis said he had become aware of that attitude among many residents of the islands located off the east side of Vancouver Island from Victoria north.

Curtis said the inter-island council could be as formally or as informally structured as the islanders themselves desire. It could provide an interchange of information on ferry services, roads and other matters of common concern.

At present, he said, there is a tendency to adopt a too insular and introspective view of issues.

Other members agreed with Curtis that the basic problem of lack of communication doesn't come within the committee's terms of reference. Gerry Anderson (NDP — Kamloops) urged Newton to go back to Denman, contact other residents and formulate a community point of view which could be submitted when the committee visits the island later this year.

Newton said one of the main concerns of the island's 300 residents is to see an end to all commercial logging and the logging lands placed under some reserve category, possibly by the proposed land commission.

"Half of the island is owned by the logging companies which is a trauma to us," he said.

THINGS GROW in spring sunshine but from two feet to four? That's carrying Victoria's time-honored reputation for fertility too far. Actually, it can all be explained. Grass on the UVic campus is warm and inviting these days and studying for exams can leave a fellow weary. In this case, the prospect of a little doze in the sun attracted two, one obviously smaller than the other.

Propane Trial Urged For Four City Vehicles

Victoria city council's public works committee recommended today that council put four of its service vehicles on a 90-day trial using propane gas.

Bill Price, of Cigas Products Ltd., said the trial would cost the city nothing but the price of the fuel used.

A reduction in provincial taxes introduced by the NDP government comes into effect next month, putting the highest cost of propane per gallon at 24.5 cents plus 10 cents tax. Bulk purchases would reduce the cost to some extent.

Price told a council committee propane gave better mileage than vehicles with the increasingly inefficient emission control equipment needed for regular gasoline.

He said further reductions in the efficiency of normal gas engines would come with U.S. 1975 emission standards. He said the purchaser of a car in that year would pay $700 for emission control equipment.

Propane, produced in B.C., used as a fuel reduces emission of pollutants by up to 70 per cent, Price said.

Engines wear better, maintenance costs are lower and mileage improves, he said, although the fuel is not yet being pushed for private car owners because propane stations, of which there are few, do not have proper measuring equipment.

Under the deal being recommended to the city, Cigas will set up a fueling station in the public works yard. Trucks will be fitted with propane pressure tanks which have a valve that closes automatically in case of rupture of the fuel line.

Price said he had never heard of a fire or explosion occurring in an accident involving a propane-powered vehicle.

The city has 200 vehicles. Some major haulers in Vancouver, among them Johnson Terminals Ltd., have recently introduced fleets of propane-powered trucks.

Man Remanded On Murder Count

Victoria's first capital murder charge in five years was read in provincial court today against a 42-year-old Victoria man charged in a March 14 stabbing death.

Roydon Gaylord Morrison, 132 Dallas, was originally charged with the non-capital murder of Wallace Omar Stevenson, 51, a fellow resident at the Dallas Road boarding house for alcoholics.

A preliminary hearing into the non-capital murder charge has already been set for June 11, 12 and 13. The charge was remanded to April 10 to fix a day for a hearing.

The last capital murder charge in Victoria was laid five years ago, against Orlando Trozzo, in the shooting of another man. Trozzo was later given seven years on a reduced charge.

The last execution in British Columbia was 12 years ago. The last in Canada took place in Ontario in 1961.

Six years later, Ottawa suspended the death penalty for all but the killings of police officers and prison guards. That five-year experimental suspension ended this year and so far has not been replaced by new legislation.

And Now a Starveathon

After an endless stream of walkathons, bikeathons and wakeathons a Canadian Christian organization has come up with a new idea for Easter — a starveathon.

World Vision of Canada, an interdenominational missionary organization, is planning a 40-hour famine to raise money for the earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

Estimating that 17,200 people die every 40 hours of unidentified causes, largely attributed to malnutrition, the organization hopes to enlist 10,000 people across Canada to each raise $17.20 for the cause.

That would require each participant to be sponsored for 43 cents an hour and would mean raising a total of $172,000.

The famine is scheduled from 8 p.m. April 19 to noon April 21.

In Victoria, Emmanuel Baptist Church is sponsoring the famine. An organizational meeting with representatives of World Vision is planned for April 5.

Spokesmen say they hope participants will be together during the famine, but some people will have to fast at home.

World Vision is an international organization which began in the U.S. after the Second World War.

HAPPY HOOKER GETS WELCOME

The Happy Hooker is welcome to take her place on Greater Victoria bookstore shelves, according to police in Saanich, Oak Bay and Victoria.

The controversial biography of reformed prostitute Xavier Hollander, currently facing police action in Toronto, has not been the source of any complaints in this area, says Victoria's Chief J. F. Gregory.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald was asked in the legislature Monday to check allegations that Victoria police were removing the book from local stores.

A Saanich spokesman said he hadn't heard of any complaints, but assumed "it must be a good book" if there was a question raised about it in the legislature.

Oak Bay police chief John Green said there have been no complaints.

"The book stores here don't carry the book," he added.

Pre-Booking Plan For Golf Course

A new way to ration time at municipally-owned Cedar Hill golf course is being considered by the course management committee to relieve congestion.

Saanich alderman William Noel, a member of the management committee, said a system of pre-booking all golfing time will be discussed at the committee's next meeting later this month.

The Saanich course, purchased as part of the McRae estate for $1.2 million in 1967, is the only publicly-owned golf course on Vancouver Island and is heavily patronized by golfers who are not members of private clubs.

Three types of player use the course: members of Cedar Hill Golf Club, season pass holders, and random golfers.

Noel estimates a 15 per cent increase in course usage this year. There are too many club members for a small course, he said.

Although 18 holes long, Cedar Hill is shorter and has a lower par than many courses.

Mrs. Florence Genn, secretary of Cedar Hill Golf Club, said some members have quit because they've had to wait an hour or more to tee off.

She said if Cedar Hill is to be a public course fewer season passes should be sold and club membership reduced to make more time available for "green fee players," or the public at large dropping by for a game at random.

The club limits membership to 450 men, 125 women and 50 juniors. There are now 410, 121 and 50.

The pre-booking system is used currently only for weekend golf when demand is heaviest.

Elevator Men End Dispute In Province

The 30-week strike by 200 elevator installers and repairmen in British Columbia came to an end today.

Members of Local 82 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, on strike against five companies, began returning to work.

Representatives of the union and the companies met Labor Minister Bill King in his office this morning and the first negotiating meeting was to be held in the afternoon to try to resolve the dispute.

Union members went on strike across the country seven months ago in a contract dispute involving new technology and prefabrication of elevators.

Workers in other provinces began returning to work more than a week ago when the Ontario legislature ordered compulsory arbitration of the dispute.

In B.C., the Supreme Court ruled the strike illegal but the men refused to return to work because they said individual damage suits were launched against them.

In Victoria, Montgomery Elevator, which employs 17 of the 23 union members, reported an 85 per cent return to work today.

BIG BACKLOG

Manager C. S. Dumaresq said there is a heavy backlog of work.

John Neil, western representative of the union, said he expects it will be several days before there is a complete return to work.

King told reporters after he met both sides that mediation officer Gus Leonidas has been assigned to assist the parties.

He said there had been no collective bargaining in B.C. to this point "and this is what we are getting under way now."

He said negotiations had been on a national basis because it was a national agreement involved.

These talks were conducted in Ontario and until it "became apparent that Ontario was unable to come up with an agreement that would be instituted in all the other provinces, it was virtually impossible for the other provinces to intervene."

Neil said journeymen installers will get an interim 61-cent pay increase, to $7.12 an hour, but other conditions are unchanged pending mediation.

B.C. courts held that the strike was illegal because the union never attempted to bargain a contract within B.C. If the union had bargained locally and reached an impasse, then the strike would have been legal.

'Mad Hatter' Idea Blasted

A plan to build a $5 million convention centre complex opposite the Legislative Buildings was described today as a "Mad Hatter's tea party" by Mayor Peter Pollen.

The proposed complex would include hotel rooms, an auditorium for 200 people, an art gallery, and satellite facilities, according to one of the businessmen behind the plan Dr. Harne Lane, president of Royal London Wax Museum.

The new centre would occupy the present site of the wax museum at 470 Belleville Street. The property is owned by Marathon Realty, Vancouver, a subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Lane was unwilling to discuss the centre, the people involved or the height of the proposed building, but said "we will be going underground for parking."

He said two companies are involved in the plan. Financing will come "basically from Victoria, although there is potential for outside money."

Lane said his group has not yet placed a proposal before city council but had approached aldermen "informally."

Pollen said he had heard of the plan and considers a convention centre in front of the legislature "the height of lunacy."

He compared the plan to the Mad Hatter's tea party and said those involved should "get the top off the teapot and come before city council with a decent proposal."

Health Permits Mailed to Cafes

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer today said that permits now required by eating places under changes in the Health Act have been put in the mail to most of them.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said some of the establishments will have received interim permits, giving them time to meet more stringent public health standards.

Others have not been dealt with yet but there is no need for operators without a permit to become alarmed. Their situation will be evaluated in due course, he said.

The new regulations became effective April 1 and under them, all 378 public eating places between Port Renfrew and the Gulf Islands require a permit signed by Whitbread.

The permit depends on operators meeting public health requirements spelled out in more detail in the new regulaions.

Requirements relating to washrooms and dish-washing equipment are expected to force some of the smaller operations out of business eventually.

Fairfield Residents Alerted Against Repair Swindlers

Better Business Bureau director Bill Tindall suspects there is a ring of swindlers in the city operating a home repairs racket.

The ring was operating in the Fairfield area Monday, said Tindall, knocking on people's doors and offering to make repairs on their chimneys, roofs and gutters.

One woman was told her chimney was in a really dangerous condition and could be repaired for $240, he said.

"This was sheer nonsense," said Tindall.

The ring is probably people from the Mainland, said Tindall, but someone is supplying them with lists of prospective "customers", people who have had home repairs in the last year or so.

He suspects that a few people in the home repair business locally are selling their lists of customers to other people in the business, and getting a kickback on deals made.

One elderly man paid $1,200 for home repairs this year to one of these shady operators, said Tindall. An appraisal later by a reputable firm showed the repairs amounted to $150.

The swindlers often paint a "disaster situation", he said, telling the prospective customer that his roof or gutters must be fixed immediately.

Anyone approached on a direct basis for home repairs should demand to see the man's trades licence, should get a contract stating a fixed price and itemizing the work to be done, and should refuse to pay in advance, said Tindall.

When Mom Is in the Know

By CHRISTINE COLLINS

LONDON (FWF) — Lucy Victoria, my baby daughter, is almost one year old. Yet I feel that I have known her for much longer than 12 months. For although Lucy is normal in every way, she is a baby that made history. I knew her sex six months before she was born.

Of course, many other mothers claim the same knowledge. You sometimes hear a woman say after the event: "I knew I was having a boy because my bulge was pear-shaped," or "I never doubted that I would have girl because when I dangled my wedding ring in front of the lump, it turned anti-clockwise."

Women have indulged in this type of pregnancy superstition down the ages with reasonable success. After all, there was always a 50-50 chance that they would be right. My knowledge, however, was based on scientific evidence.

SPOT TOLD

I was one of the first women in Britain to undergo an ante-natal screening test which, incidentally, reveals the sex of the unborn child. The test, called amniocentesea, was carried out when I was 16 weeks pregnant at the Middlesex Hospital in London.

The gynaecologist simply stuck a needle through my abdomen and drew off a small amount of amniotic fluid (which surrounds every unborn baby in the womb). This was then put under a microscope.

As the chromosomes in the amniotic fluid are that of the baby, it was easy to tell it was female — simply by staining the cells and looking for a sex chromatin body. Evidently if a dark spot shows up it is a girl. No spot, and it is a boy.

When I was told I was having a daughter, I was delighted. With two boys in the family and a history of miscarriages, I had almost given up hope of ever having a girl. Naturally I adore my sons, but I am sure there is plenty of truth in the old saying that "a son is a son till he gets him a wife, a daughter's a daughter for the rest of her life."

My friends thought I was mad when — at four months pregnant — I went shopping for little dresses and frilly pants. Yes, I was tickled pink and took no notice of the sceptics who told me not to place my faith in science.

Yet I never for a moment doubted that I was having a daughter, particularly as a geneticist explained the test was 100 per cent accurate.

But when Lucy puffs her candle out on her first birthday, I shall hardly believe we have only had her for a year. What with knowing her sex in advance, I feel she has been a member of the family now for 18 months.

LIMITED AVAILABILITY

So far, the test, which is a major breakthrough in antenatal care, is only being carried out in certain cases in Britain and America. But doctors hope that within the next few years it will be available to all women at risk of having an abnormal baby.

Because there is a slight danger of miscarrying after the womb has been punctured, it will never be carried out just for sexing a child. For the primary object of it is to see that the baby is normal and not just whether it will be a boy or girl.

"Apart from the moral issues of terminating a pregnancy just because the baby was the wrong sex," explained a geneticist, "if we allowed this to happen there would be too many men around and a shortage of women. Most mothers want sons — particularly in farming communities."

In fact, the reason I underwent the test was that after several miscarriages the doctors found from blood tests that I had what is called a "chromosome abnormality." This means that my body could have been previously aborting imperfect babies. So that when I carried a baby past 16 weeks, the doctors wanted to make sure all was well.

So far abnormality tests have only been carried out on expectant mothers from "high risk" families. These include older women who become pregnant, those with a chro*mosome abnormality* like myself, and women with a history of hereditary diseases. If the test shows that something is wrong with the unborn baby, then the mother is offered an abortion.

Fortunately for me, I did not have to make such a heartbreaking decision. In fact, of the 140 pregnant women screened in Britain last year, only one had her pregnancy terminated. The surprising thing about this first mass screening, however, was that only half of the expectant mums wanted to know the sex of their children. The rest told doctors: "Please keep it a secret. We'd rather it came as a surprise."

One woman said that if she knew the sex in advance, it would be like watching a football match but knowing the score before kick-off. Half the thrill would be gone.

Curbing Woman's Height: Who Sees the Injustice?

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UPI) — The worth and safety of the one medical possibility for stopping tall and growing girls from growing much taller has been brought into queston. That's a pity. It's all right for the male to be unusually tall but not for the female and so far Women's Lib has done nothing about the injustice of it.

The method has been to supplement the child's natural flow of estrogen, the basic hormone of femaleness, with an added supply from the outside. It is done at or just before puberty, when "bone age" still is markedly immature, before bones have closed, precluding further lengthening.

Since it came into medical use in 1957 it has been a matter of controversy. Some doctors found it effective while others didn't. But none reported enough instances for use and, for comparison, of non-use to make a strong case pro or con. This breach is now filled by Drs. Edgar J. Schoen and Irene L. Solomon.

They reported to the American Medical Association of 21 tall, immature girls whom they treated with outside estrogen and 17 whom they studied but did not treat. These children were patients of the Kaiser - Permanent Medical Centre, Oakland, Cal., between 1965 and 1970.

They have now reached their mature heights.

If "predicted mature height," (according to tables which take into account bone age and present height), was six feet or taller, the doctors recommended estrogen treatment. If predicted mature height was less than six feet, the treatment was offered to parents and child but was not recommended because long-term effects are not known.

First of all the results indicated the unreliability of the prediction tables. In only two of the 17 untreated girls did they predict correctly. This made the appraising of the outcome in the treated all the more difficult. By statistical methods the scientists came to this conclusion.

There is "a statistically significant probability that exogenous (outside) estrogen limits ultimate heights, but only by an average of about 1.6 inches."

To that they added: "in offering this treatment one must weigh the potential ill effects of estrogen administration to young girls against a demonstrated modest decrease in mature height."

All the girls were healthy, free of any disease that might have contributed to their tallness. Their parents and families were examined and measured, too. The doctors were not surprised by one finding — that all the girls "were from tall families."

CANCER VACCINES SUCCEED

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Scientists from two research institutes have reported on what they describe as promised treatments for cancer, in which the patients' bodies were vaccinated to reject the already widespread disease.

Dr. Hillard Seigler of Duke University Medical Centre in Durham, N.C., and Dr. Chester Southam of Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, told a symposium on cancer Friday their relatively-new treatments attempt to boost patients' disease-fighting systems so they can reject their tumors.

"We are encouraged with these results, but it is still too soon to say they are cured for sure," Seigler told reporters.

In all the cases the patients had undergone conventional treatments for malignancies but the cancers returned and spread throughout their bodies.

Seigler said he had 180 patients suffering with extremely serious melanomas, a type of skin cancer almost impossible to treat successfully once it has spread.

After using a four-stage immunotherapy regimen, 41 patients, 23 per cent, have been disease-free for at least three years, he said.

Seigler said his group at Duke found two-thirds of the 180 patients had highly deficient immune systems so they used various vaccines, including one used to treat tuberculosis, to restore the body's capacity to fight its own disease.

Southam reported on a seven-year study of 33 patients with bone tumors, which occur frequently but almost always strike young people. Such tumors usually result in death because by the time they are discovered they have spread to other parts of the body.

Get Together for Brunch

Statistics show that families are eating fewer and fewer meals together as a group.

Time is at a premium for most as they scramble to fit in work, sports and various other hobbies and interests. During the week meal times are frequently staggered to accommodate each person's activity or snacks are grabbed on the run. Weekends or Sundays in particular are the times family members have to spend together and brunch is a happy way to start it off. Neither breakfast nor lunch it is a leisurely relaxed meal that combines the best of both.

To make this time together extra special plan to serve something different. It needn't be time consuming or difficult just a fun idea. Popovers are the perfect answer. Not just any popovers but Super Colossal Popovers, mounded sky high and golden brown they are a fun bread that literally 'pop over' the cups they are baked in. They are not difficult to make and use the most basic of ingredients, milk, butter, eggs and flour. You'll be giving your family the natural goodness of dairy products in a way that will bring them back for more.

Add all the ingredients to the blender container then cover and blend until smooth. Pour the batter into prepared muffin or custard cups and watch the fun. They rise before your very eyes, so high and puffy you'll think they are going to burst long before they finish baking. They come from the oven golden and crisp on the outside, hollow, tender and moist on the inside. Break them open and slather with butter and jam or try a combination of the two by preparing Marmalade Butter. If you haven't a blender the popover batter can be made quite quickly with an electric mixer or by hand. Either way they are easy to make, fun to serve and delicious to eat.

SUPER COLOSSAL POPOVERS
(Makes 8 Servings)

1⅓ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups milk
4 eggs
4 teaspoons grated orange rind
4 teaspoons soft butter

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Grease eight 6-ounce custard cups well. Sift together flour and salt. Place milk, eggs, orange rind and butter in blender container. Add sifted dry ingredients. Cover and blend at high speed for 15 seconds. With spatula scrape down any flour that has collected on the sides of the container. Continue blending at high speed until thoroughly combined. Fill prepared pans approximately half full. Bake in preheated oven 60 minutes or until puffed and golden. Remove from pans and serve immediately with Marmalade Butter.

MARMALADE BUTTER
(Makes Approx. ¾ Cup)

½ cup soft butter
⅓ cup marmalade

Cream butter, blend in marmalade. Serve with popovers.

The best brunch of all is one in which most of the preparation can be done the night before. French toast is a natural here. Once again not just any French toast but French Toast A L'Orange. Cut day old French bread into ¾-inch thick slices and soak them in a mixture of eggs, milk, sugar and vanilla in the refrigerator overnight. In the morning they will be saturated with the mixture and almost dou*ble in height.* Saute the slices in melted butter until they are golden and crisp on the outside and custardy on the inside.

Spread liberally with the special orange butter and top with maple syrup. Served with sausages and a fruit cup they make for great weekend brunches.

FRENCH TOAST A L'ORANGE
(Makes 6 Servings)

4 eggs
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspooon vanilla
6 (¾-inch) thick slices day old French bread
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup soft butter
¼ cup icing sugar
1½ tablespoons grated orange rind

To Make Toast: Beat eggs lightly to combine. Beat in milk, sugar and vanilla. Pour over bread slices in a large pan. Turn slices of bread over once; cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight. Melt butter in a large frypan. Saute until golden on both sides. Serve with Orange Butter and maple syrup.

To Make Orange Butter: Cream butter; beat in sugar and orange rind. Serve with French Toast.

Although to date over 650,000 Canadian patents have been issued and some 24,000 new applications are filed every year, few potential inventors know how to obtain a patent for their brainchild.

To remedy this situation, the Canadian Patent Office has published a 12-page booklet entitled Patents — Questions And Answers which should be read by everybody who thinks he has invented something. It will also clarify the thinking of those who are dreaming of becoming inventors.

The booklet explains that a patent excludes other people for 17 years from producing, using or selling the invention in Canada. To protect an invention in other countries, a patent has to be obtained there.

You will also learn what type of subject matters may be patented and which are not patentable. Unpatentable, for instance, is a surgical procedure, a new plant variety, a recipe, a method of doing business or a device that is useless.

It takes an average of 30 months from the time an application is filed until the patent is granted. Present costs include a payment of $50 when the application is submitted, upwards of $80 when the patent is issued and certain other fees.

Springwood: A Family Feeling Being Built family

By PAT MUNSON

Education of the public in its attitude toward victims of mental retardation is sometimes the biggest problem faced by workers in the mental health field.

"Training the public to realize the potential of the mildly or moderately retarded worker is often a harder task than training the youth to be ready for outside employment," says Clive Dench, assistant administrator at Springwood training centre in Central Saanich.

The sprawling country home on Mt. Newton Cross Road is nearly ready to receive its first residents who will be young men and women between the ages of 16 and 25.

"Parents" will be Ted and Janet Sullivan, both of whom have worked extensively with retarded and handicapped children in Canada and England.

Sullivan was until Christmas principal of Victor St. school for retarded children, run by Greater Victoria School District. He has a good idea of the potential offered by many of the new residents whose applications are considered by a screening committee.

Springwood is the first facility of its kind to serve southern Vancouver Island. Beyan Lodge in Courtenay has residents in a wider age group and there is a centre similar to Springwood in Smither, B.C.

Statistics show that three out of every 100 babies are victims of mental retardation and these training homes are an indication of the progress being made in treatment.

The house and 3.6 acres was purchased by Greater Victoria Association for Retarded Children with the aid of a legacy left by a Victoria resident Mrs. Hanna Matthews.

★

Fiona Campbell-Sayers, GVAR executive director, emphasizes that Springwood is not a permanent home for its young people, but a sheltered environment in which they can learn skills and become assimilated into community life.

"Given the opportunity, these youngsters can do so much more than anybody has accepted they can do," says Miss Campbell-Sayers. "These people have had their potential developed from the earliest age in pre-school, kindergarten and special learning facilities. Now they need a broader base for life, and in Springwood we are reaching out to meet that need."

Ted Sullivan, administrator, hopes to establish a strong nucleus of volunteer help and potential employment on the Peninsula. The location is ideally suited to training in agricultural and horticultural skills and residents will grow their own vegetables, raise chickens and learn woodworking crafts.

A major task will be helping these mildly and moderately retarded youngsters to be at ease with the public—and encouraging the public to be at ease with them.

"People sometimes confuse mental retardation with mental illness," says Sullivan. "It is necessary to find sympathetic employers who realize that retarded people are often good at unskilled work which bores the average person. They are easy to please, don't criticize and respond quickly to encouragement. they need to feel that the job they are doing is a useful one."

★

Clive Dench has come to Springwood from the Smithers training centre which has been in operation more than two years. Several residents, says Dench, could do nothing for themselves when they first arrived. Some were victims of institutional living, others from over-protective homes.

"You don't expect tremendous results immediately," cautions Dench. "It's a long-term project."

Some of the smithers residents are now employed outside the training centre, although they still live there and one or two have gone to the vocational school at Terrace.

"Occasionally, a different type of environment can prompt surprising development," explains Dench.

The administrative team hopes to involve young people from churches and schools in working and playing with the new residents. Sullivan did this at Victor St. School where his older students shared a drama program once a week with Victoria High School students.

There is space for soccer and other active games at Springwood and the trainees will be taken swimming and skating when the new Central Saanich recreation centre opens later this year.

"Motivation is sometimes a problem," admits Sullivan, "but music and dancing they love."

Janet Sullivan who has been wielding paintbrush and hammers with her husband, Dench and others involved in preparing the old home for its new function, is enthusiastic about her work.

Although the Sullivan's will "live in" and will be on call 24 hours a day, Janet Sullivan admits that this sort of centre is a dream they have always shared.

"I'm sure we can create a family feeling here," she says.

One method of involving the community which has worked well in Eastern Canada is the "advocate" scheme in which families make a friend of a trainee, remember birthdays and take the boy or girl out for Sunday outings.

The house is being furnished with basic needs but a little neighborly help with extras such as a sewing machine, a canoe, movie projector and living room furnishings would be appreciated.

"We also need a nice sign," says Mrs. Sullivan, "with a mail-box to match!"

The operation of Springwood will be financed by the provincial government on a per diem rate and administered by the GVAR. In addition to the administrative team, the staff will include two program workers, a secretary and cook.

Too Young to Give Up

New York Times

NEW YORK — They're caught between yesterday and tomorrow. The world they entered seems to have all but disappeared under changes as thorough as a bulldozer squashing an ant. And the one they face is undergoing convulsions that leave them sometimes baffled, sometimes lost, sometimes despairing and sometimes hopeful.

They are the middle-aged Americans, who were raised to believe in the work ethic, the desirability of affluence, the superiority of the male, the virtues of premarital virginity and marital fidelity. Now they find their children rejecting riches, sexual shackles, the sanctity of legalized faithfulness and the inequality of the sexes.

As one member of the transition generation, Eda LeShan, put it in her newly published book, "The Wonderful Crisis of Middle Age," "I am too young to give up and retreat; I must stay in the world and try to be part of it—but I am too old to feel at home in it."

Mrs. LeShan, author of eight books about children rearing and moderator of the highly acclaimed television series, "How Do Your Children Grow," has turned her attention to all the dilemmas of being middle-aged. She defines that period two ways—age (between 45 and 65) and philosophically ("The point at which you recognize that there is more behind you than there is ahead.")

At 50 she said, she fits—happily—into both categories, and began writing the book two years ago "out of my own personal life experience." That includes writing her first book when she was 43, beginning to appear regularly on television when she was 46 and getting her own program on Educational Television when she was 48.

In her book, Mrs. LeShan wrote "I have come to understand and enjoy motherhood far better and I find myself loving my daughter more deeply these last five years than during her first 15 (her adopted daughter, Wendy, is now 22), and the dimensions of wifehood seem to become more fascinating, complex and profound each day. I have learned more about who I am and what I want to be in life since the age of 40, than in all the years before."

It is the self-understanding that she herself arrived at, albeit wrenchingly through 20 years in and out of psychotherapy, that Mrs. LeShan upholds as the beacon of middle age.

When asked during an interview whether the young, now on an odyssey of "finding themselves" do not have an edge in self-understanding, Mrs. Leshan insisted that "You need the pressure of time running out to achieve this."

Middle Age —and the pressure of time running out

The awareness of the slippage of time came to her in a series of small jolts. One was when her mother died about a year and a half ago.

"I was going through old photographs and came across one taken in 1945 of my parents," Mrs. LeShan recalled. "I suddenly realized that they were younger at that point that I was now, and yet it seemed like only a moment ago that the picture had been taken."

Then, too, the involvement of her husband, Lawrence LeShan, a clinical and research psychologist, in a project with terminally ill cancer patients "made me aware of the fact that people with six months to live, tended to live more fully," she said.

In her research — besides delving into her own life, she interviewed some 75 to 100 women and 50 men—Mrs. LeShan said she found three common denominators among the problems of middle age.

"First of all, there was the disillusionment and anxiety about children," she said. "Parents felt that their children are unhappy and blocked and are not using their fullest potential," referring to all the ramifications of the counterculture and its denial of traditional values.

"Then, there's the turbulence of marriage, which is totally different from those of our parents and grandparents," she continued. "Our generation was the first for whom the basis of marriage was not economic survival but emotional gratification, which became burdened by the fact that people are living so much longer."

Mrs. LeShan said the third problem also has its roots in the prolongation of life— that of aging parents and the guilt born out of the responsibility for them.

"We're still children, but we end up supporting our elderly parents," she said. "Now we're pushing the wheelchair where they once pushed the baby carriage. They are bitter and disappointed, for they never had the pleasures of today; they are angry at the freedom of young people, and they are a constant reminder of what could happen to us."

Mrs. LeShan said that men seem to have been hit harder than women by the burdens of middle age.

"Of all the women I interviewed, only one was depressed, while the men, with the exception of a few late bloomers, felt they were going downhill," she said.

POLICEWOMEN'S VERSATILITY LAGS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Policewomen can never be as completely versatile as policemen, Chief Constable John Fisk of the Vancouver police department says.

If the scope of policewoman's duties is widened, it should be on an experimental basis, Fisk said in the 14-page report to the police commission.

If policewomen are assigned general duties they may face violent and "other physical situations," said Fisk. "In recognition of this fact it may be desirable to consider revising recruiting qualifications, particularly physical standards."

Salons Banish Eccentricity

PARIS (Reuter) — Skirts are slightly longer and compete on level terms with trousers at the Paris ready-to-wear salon now setting popular fashion styles for autumn and winter.

A record 800 international exhibitors have attracted 60,000 buyers and critics from around the world to the vast exhibition halls here, showing mostly sane, sensible and conservative neo-classic fashions.

Eccentricity is gone. Setting the pace are traditional favorites like the British country look, all-season suits, tweeds, co-ordinated sports clothes and knitwear.

Hemlines show a definite lengthening with pleated or gored, skirts scaled well below the knee — but the trend stops far short of a return to the midi or maxi lengths which proved such a financial disaster.

Yves Saint Laurent and Emanuel Ungaro, both presenting ready-to-wear collections during the week-long salon which opened Saturday, make a big impact on the total scene.

Saint Laurent features separates with pleated skirts teamed to long jackets and high-rise pants and sweater sets. Ungaro retains the elongated blouson top which he showed in his spring and summer collection.

Early buying statistics show that trousers and skirts are almost equally popular.

Although mass-produced designers are trying to promote dresses, trousers are holding their own with new high-rise styles featuring cinched waistbands, yokes or built-in belts cut above the natural waistline and suggesting the Spanish flamenco dancer.

Classic suits are back everywhere, notably "English" suits in heavy tweeds styled with long-riding or hacking jacket and pleated skirt, pea jackets, and short fitted jackets with nipped waistline.

Coats endorse variations of the trench coat, complete with epaulettes, storm flaps and cinched belts, hooded duffles in reversible fabrics, and school girl redingotes in soft shetlands.

Youth Turns On To Volunteering

Associated Press

High school and college students are still out to change society, but instead of protest marches and confrontations, volunteer work has become the in thing.

In the U.S. number of students involved in Red Cross volunteer work has increased by 600,000 during the last two years. At Furman College in Greenville, S.C., more than half the 2,000 students take part in 55 volunteer projects.

Nicholas W. Craw, head of recruiting for ACTION, the U.S. government's volunteer agency, said Peace Corps applications are 37 per cent higher than last year's. Most are from persons under 25.

The State University of New York at Albany has organized a community service program, giving credits for six hours weekly of volunteer work at schools, hospitals and community agencies.

PROGRAM OVERFLOWS

Director of the program, Hedi McKinley, says she can accommodate 550 students each semester, and often has to turn applicants away.

She says a number of student volunteers come from upper middle class families, and have time for unpaid work.

"These kids have lived the sheltered life of dancing schools and piano lessons," she said.

"They want to find out how the other half lives."

Many students say they volunteer to get experience for future careers and to find out if they would like a particular profession. Law students give free legal aid to housing project residents. Medical students help staff storefront clinics is poor areas; education students tutor and work with handicapped and retarded children.

There are dropouts and both students and administrators admit that some young people are often unrealistic about the time and effort called for in volunteer jobs.

But most community agencies, hospitals and schools where student volunteers work report satisfaction with their work.

IMPROVEMENT DRAMATIC

"We just couldn't run a lot of our therapeutic programs without the students," says Paula Womack, co-ordinator of volunteer services at Austin, Tex., State Hospital. "We've placed these students with some of our sickest patients, and we've had some rather dramatic improvements as a result of these one-to-one relationships."

The students themselves find personal rewards in the work. Gary Sussman, a volunteer worker at an Albany Medical Centre, says, "You go through an identity crisis when you realize you're just student No. 58821. You need to seek out warmth and personalism."

John Ness, a pre-med student who works with handicapped children, says "The experience has been uplifting. I know that sounds corny, but it makes you appreciate your own position in life."

NATIONALIST TURN IN WOMEN'S LIB

TORONTO (CP) — Canada needs a women's liberation movement separate from that of the United States, a meeting at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education was told.

Prof. Robin Mathews of Carleton University in Ottawa said that he frequently has been told by Canadian women that the liberation movement in this country is being "twisted by U.S. women."

He said that libraries in Canada are full of literature concerning the U.S. women's liberation movement "to the exclusion of English and even Canadian materials."

Progressive Canadians, he said, should "throw out most of the U.S. influence and U.S. women messing around in Canadian women's liberation."

Prof. Mathews is a leader in the campaign against U.S. domination of Canadian university faculties.

dear abby

His Mother Was North American

DEAR ABBY: I am a foreign-born woman, but I enjoy reading your column to study the strange, insecure ways of North Americans.

Most men are henpecked by bossy wives who in turn shout for their own liberation. It makes me laugh. Since I have come to this country I can now understand why so many men prefer to marry foreign women. We are not so different from American women, only we actually enjoy our womanhood and do not try to be something else. We are truly liberated and it is a lot of nonsense that we walk three steps behind our husbands and refrain from speaking our minds.

The boldness and lack of grace I have observed in many North American women make it quite obvious why there are so many divorces in your country. In my country, we say: "A strong wife and mother is the source of a strong husband, children and country."

What could be more complimentary to Women? S.M.G.

(P.S. I am married to a wonderful North American man.)

DEAR S. M. G.: I presume your "wonderful North American man" was raised by a North American mother who must have done something right.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old, college-educated, fairly good-looking woman. I am single. To get right to the point, I have dated many men, but not one of them has ever turned me on. I feel absolutely nothing when a man kisses me. But that is not the case with women. I would like to be the "man" to another woman. I have never done anything with either sex. How would you define a homosexual? — No Name.

DEAR NO: A homosexual is one who has erotic feelings about members of his (or her) own sex.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old, married, and am working. We have no children and don't plan on having any for another three years. When that time comes, I plan on quitting my job and staying home until the child goes to school. That will mean six years of being completely dependent on my husband — financially.

I am very independent, and I can't see asking my husband for every cent I need or want. I like to spend money, and I buy many things that aren't necessities.

I am contemplating opening my own bank account and keeping it a secret from my husband. That way I will have some money saved up and I won't have to beg, borrow or steal. what is your opinion? — Curious.

DEAR CURIOUS: I don't know what your financial agreement is with your husband, but if you agreed to pool your earnings and share it, for you to have a secret account would be dishonest.

Saving is a sound idea. Why not tell your husband that you'd like to start saving now for the time when you'll not be a working wife? And by the way, where did you get the idea, that non-working wives must either beg, borrow or steal in order to get money from their husbands?

DEAR ABBY: How does a guy go about finding one of those girls who's a sure thing? Know what I mean? The kind who meets a guy, and if they dig each other, she'll have an affair with him without getting too serious. They may even live together without any strings attached.

I've had the marriage bit, thanks, and I played it square, but she sure had me fooled. And when we split up, she took me for all I was good for.

I've thought of running an ad in the paper, but I don't know how to word it without being downright blunt. I'm no bum. I've got a job and I don't wear my hair long. Vital statistics: 34 years old, 6 feet tall, 180 pounds. Have brown eyes and dark hair, and can be amorous.

Please publish this. I may get a straight answer. You can skip the sermon. I once believed in love and marriage, but no more. At least this way there's no phony baloney, and everyone knows the score. — Looking

DEAR LOOKING: You need me to help you find a "sure thing" like a moose needs a hatrack. The pickup joints are full of them. A word of warning, however, if you are seriously considering such a girl: Make a standing appointment with your physician every morning. You're a cinch to need it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "C": Sometimes the easiest way "around" something is through it. So quit looking for angles and DO it!

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

At some time or other, the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us; but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time. We would like to thank all who sent cards, letters and donated to the Heart Fund. A special thank you to Dr. Portelance and the nurses at the Jubilee Hospital for their untiring care. Also Archdeacon Jones and Rev. Titus for their beautiful service and comforting words.
—Mrs. T. Milburn; Son, Bruce; Daughter-in-law, Pam; Grandsons, Rick, Don and Kim.

9 IN MEMORIAM

FRY—In loving memory of dear Donna, who passed away April 3, 1972.
They say that time will ease the pain,
And help me to forget.
But time so far has only shown
How much I miss you yet.
I miss your smile, your voice, your talk;
The things we used to do.
I miss the happy times we had.
But mostly I miss you.
—Ever remembered by Grandma Davison and Uncle Ken.

HALL—In loving memory of our dear mother and Gran, Mrs. Ada Hall. Passed away April 4, 1971.
In my heart your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true;
There's not a day dear mother and Gran,
I do not think of you.
—Dorine, Beverley and Dick.

HULL—In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away April 3, 1971.
Not dead to me who loved him,
Not lost but gone before.
He lives with me in memory,
And will forever more.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Christie Hull.

NELSON—In memory of Philip, beloved husband and father, who passed away April 3, 1970.
—Sadly missed and quietly remembered by his loving wife and family.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Late Marriages Less Risky

In that splendid journal put out by the American Association for Retired Persons, "Modern Maturity," I read that couples who remarry late in life have an excellent chance of making a success of their unions.

Walter C. McKain, professor of sociology at the University of Connecticut, studied the lives of 100 aging couples five years after they married. He found that only six out of these marriages appeared to be failures. Some of these people had married for the third or fourth time. All the men were at least 65, the women at least 60, when they wed.

Companionship was listed as the major reason for remarrying by almost 75 per cent of the men and 66 per cent of the women. Some women needed more income. A number of the men admitted that they were looking for a live-in cook, housekeeper, or nurse, while some of the women admitted that they craved a home with a man around it.

I can believe what this man says. I recently saw a couple who, after several years of divorce, married again, and today they seem to be very happy. Many a time, an older woman has told me that she much craved the affection and companionship of a man mainly because, as she said, "Doctor, have you ever eaten alone?"

KNIT & CHAT

By MAY MACLEAN

Mrs. Coolidge's great-grandmother's knitted counterpane on No. 6949 is rather intricate, but very rewarding for those of you that like a challenge.

No. 7060 the Sunflower Bedspread is quite easily knitted in blocks too, and is an extremely handsome design. Knitted mats or doilies, worked on four needles, which can if you wish be joined together to make one large centre piece, are on Leaflet No. 6947.

This week's pattern is another truly lovely idea, No. 7269 Rose Bower Bedspread. One simple plain crochet block alternating with the "rose" block, not at all intricate. With blocks one can make the bedspread any individual size. Here we see it as a single bed size, but instructions are given for the double bed size. The crochet cotton specified is readily available in the stores from a Canadian company. This too would make a wonderful gift for a bride!

To order Leaflet No. 7269, or any other leaflet mentioned, send 50 cents for each, plus a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, care of the Times, 2621 Douglas.

Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope. Allow 10 days for delivery. All patterns are 50 cents. The illustrated catalogue of other designs available is 60 cents.

Milk Hike Pleases Farmers

OTTAWA (CP) — Dairy farmer representatives say they are generally pleased with subsidy increases for manufacturing milk announced last week by the government but add that other increases will be needed if production costs don't drop.

In a news release Monday the Dairy Farmers of Canada, pressure group representing the industry's farmers, said increases of up to 60 cents for each 100 pounds of industrial milk sold are an improvement over old benefits. Dairymen formerly received from $4.50 to $6 for their milk used to make cheese, butter and powder, depending on the province.

But "unless recent costs for feed and other necessities in dairy production decline, further increases in returns will be necessary."

Effective today, the increases mean butter will cost three cents more a pound and skim milk, six cents more a pound.

They result from government-approved increases in the support, or guaranteed, price for dairy products announced last Thursday by the government.

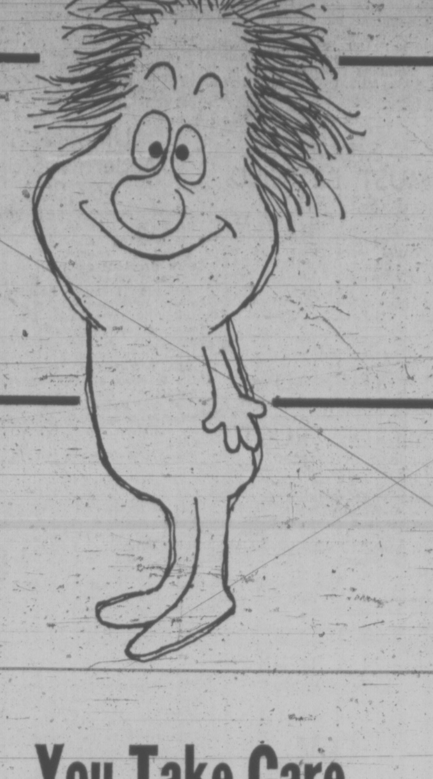
How To Write Your SUCCESSFUL CLASSIFIED AD...



You Take Care of the DESCRIPTION and the REPLIES Will TAKE CARE OF THEMSELVES

1. Start your ad with the name of the article or the service you have to offer. Be clear. Readers respond more favorably when given complete, definite information.
2. Make it easy for the interested reader to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for responding readers to contact you.
3. You will get great reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best — and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to advertise their goods or services every day.
4. Check the success of your copy by asking "What, why, who, where and when." The answers you give will enable you to assess whether your copy is complete.
5. Classified ads that fail usually do so, not through lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information Classified readers are interested and ready to buy. Clear, concise copy will attract their attention and complete the transaction

Look for Damage Now From Winter's Cold

We tend to forget the two low temperature spells of the winter in the subsequent weeks of mild yet often rainless weather. Yet in early December we registered a low of 10 degs. F; here, and a month later 12. degs. F.

At that time we were wondering what permanent damage might result with some of the less hardy of the plants we grow. On April 1, so as not to fool ourselves any longer, an assessment was made.

If you have these plants in your garden, you may have more or less harm than I mention, either because of your general location or because your plants were more mature or younger, or were more protected by an environment of denser, hardier shrubs.

The one I've been watching all season is Drumys winteri, a favorite evergreen from Australia which had been cut to almost soil level in the 1968-69 winter. After recovering to its former height with entirely new growth, our two specimens flowered freely last year and even set a few little dark purple fruits.

Now the leaves have turned a rusty brown except for the tallest branch which still has considerable green. The other plant has a good green shoot or two at the base. These signs of life prevent the drastic cutting back I might be inclined to inflict. I shall wait until the warmer weather of May before making a decision.

The lovely fragrant Rosemary, Rosmarinus officinalis, growing to eight feet or more against a sunny sheltered wall, received only the odd few inches of completely frosted branch ends, but the equally lovely prostrate form, R. prostratus, has no apparent life in its ground-hugging branches, so I shortened them all. If new shoots appear, all well and good, but for just such an emergency, two nice young plants of this dainty little rosemary escaped harm growing in cans in an open frame protected only by some rather straggling thyme plants.

Escallonias are rated only as half hardy shrubs here, yet some varieties survive anything we've experienced in the past 18 years.

E. Donard Seedling suffers only tip damage in the worst winters, making it necessary to do a real clean-up job each spring on large shrubs. They are worth the trouble when June brings every long new growth into drooping ropes of pink and white bloom. Escallonia rubra, normally evergreen, lost its leaves in January this year leaving the whole shrub with a dark brown appearance.

Looking at it now, the difficulty is to decide if new growth is to come from roots or low down on the old branches. The only thing to do is to cut off whatever seems without life.

The true Myrtus communis will need cutting back to live branches; Phormium tenax, New Zealand-flax, may recover with growth from the rootstocks if it lost all its leaves as ours did.

Be observant, and be gentle. You may save a treasured plant.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal arose in a top-level rubber-bridge game played earlier this year. Sitting North — the dummy-to-be — was one of the world's top-ranking players, Robert Jordan of Philadelphia. When play had ended, he slapped his palm on the table and proclaimed: "I quit. This game is too tough for me."

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	2 ♠	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The bidding was highly aggressive, with South's ultimate four-heart contract being a rather optimistic one. But had East-West not come up with a couple of razzle-dazzle plays, 10 tricks would have been made.

After capturing the opening lead with his ace of spades, declarer cashed dummy's two top hearts, gathering in the oustanding pieces. He next led a low club towards his queen, East winning the trick with the king.

In the East seat was Mark Blumenthal who, in 1971, amassed 961 master points, finishing second in the nation behind Barry Crane. It was Blumenthal who initiated the winning defence. After taking his king of clubs, he did not cash the spade jack or queen. Instead he underled his Q-J holding in spades!

West won this lead with his 10-spot and promptly led the deuce of diamonds. As declarer viewed the set-up, Blumenthal, who had made a two-spade overcall, certainly rated to have the diamond ace (if not both the queen and ace of diamonds). So he played low from dummy and East's queen captured the trick. East then returned a diamond, and West's ace took the setting trick.

Had declarer guessed to put up dummy's king on West's diamond lead, he would have fulfilled his contract with an overtrick. With the king winning, the South hand would then have been re-entered via the club queen, East's jack falling. South's remaining spade would now be ruffed, and on the ace and 10 of clubs South would discard his two remaining diamonds.

And, equally evident, if East, upon taking his king of clubs, had cashed either the queen or jack of spades, it would have become impossible to get West into the lead, for the latter to underlead his diamond ace. It was a neat exhibition of imaginative defensive play, resulting in a well-deserved reward.

Birth Control Meeting Here

Up to 60 medical students and academic staff from Canadian universities are expected to attend a May 31-June 3 birth control conference in Victoria.

But so far, said co-ordinator Dr. Harv Haakonson, response from the deans of medical schools has been slight.

"You would think that family planning and population growth problems as they relate to the physician's role in society would be a major concern of deans at medical schools in an effort to improve and prepare medical students for their future responsibilities," Dr. Haakonson said.

Only four of 16 deans asked to send their views have replied. A formal invitation to take part in the conference was to go out this week.

Besides the students, representing all Canadian medical schools, about a dozen faculty people providing resource material are asked to participate.

Haakonson is national co-ordinator of the student conference sponsored by a federal government grant and at present is an intern at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The conference will be held in Eric Martin Institute.

Haakonson said results will be published, probably through the department of national health and welfare.

The intern said he is concerned that only limited practical family planning experience is available to senior medical students.

"In most cases it is only during the student's elective time that he has the opportunity to gain experience in birth control techniques."

Student Loans Called In

TORONTO (CP) — In the first hard step in a campaign to force repayment of more than $1.6 million in loan defaults, the Ontario government plans to take 110 defaulters to court to recover $275,000 in long-overdue student loans.

Students are the main targets but farmers, doctors and nurses could face summonses later.

Tax Cuts Slammed

TORONTO (UPI) — Opposition leader Robert Stanfield said Monday the government's proposed corporate tax cuts would in some cases "simply benefit the treasuries of other countries."

Speaking to the Toronto Board of Trade, Stanfield said that subsidiaries of foreign companies in Canada would receive "about half" of the estimated $500 million in corporate savings resulting from the proposed measures.

He reiterated that he would support tax cuts for the manufacturing and processing industries only if a one-year limit is placed on them.

The government proposals call for a reduction from 49 to 40 per cent in the tax rates for manufacturing and processing industries, as well as a five per cent reduction in the small business tax rate.

He attacked the proposals for their "distortion and unfairness" and added they "involve a substantial amount of waste."

The government has estimated that corporate taxpayers in Canada will save $500 million if the proposals are implemented.

Finance Minister John Turner has repeatedly said this savings will lead to more jobs in the manufacturing and processing industries.

Air Act Delay Claimed

WASHINGTON (WP) — The White House has asked how it could "force" states to delay cleaning up the air so fuel supplies could be stretched, according to an internal government memo obtained Monday.

Two environmental groups have seized upon the memo and related material as evidence that the Nixon administration is trying to take the teeth out of the Clean Air Act.

But the author of the memo said Monday that it and other material represent nothing more than staff work undertaken as President Nixon prepares his energy message, now slated for delivery late this month or early in May.

JEOPARDY

"The White House people are particularly interested in any steps we could take to 'force' the states to delay implementation" of their plans for cleaning up the air "where the attainment of primary standards is not jeopardized," wrote Robert Sansom, assistant administrator for air and water programs at the Environmental Protection Agency.

The "primary standards" are those that the EPA, as the federal government's watchdog on pollution, sets to make sure the air is safe to breathe.

The standards, for example, limit the amount of sulphur and other pollutants that can be spewed out of smokestacks.

White House aide Peter Flanigan has headed Nixon administration task force working on the president's energy message.

According to the Sansom memo, written in January, Flanigan's staff asked for EPA's opinions on various possibilities to ease the Clean Air Act.

PRESSURE

The government was under pressure from the fuel industry to ease standards so dirtier coal and oil could be burned.

Sansom, in noting that "there will not be enough low-sulphur coal or sulphur removal equipment by 1975" to achieve the clean air standards contemplated by the act, added:

"If oil import policies allow, there could be sufficient quantities of oil to enable states to comply with SIPs (State Implementation Plans for cleaning up their air) by 1975. Thus, Sansom continued, moves to delay state clean-up plans "are aimed at minimizing coal industry disruptions."

Environmentalists have argued that the Nixon administration should import more clean-burning oil rather than start the unravelling of the clean air act by easing up on the purity standards for domestic fuels.

Drug Sale Jails City Man

A 20-year-old Victoria man was sentenced Monday in county court to a total of six months' definite, six months' indeterminate on two counts of trafficking in hashish and one of possession of marijuana.

Amarjeet Lagah, 2915 Austin, admitted selling hashish on two occasions, in June and July last year, to RCMP undercover agent Blaine Froats. When arrested Oct. 13, a small quantity of marijuana was found on him.

Lagah was sentenced to six months' definite, six indeterminate on each of the trafficking charges and three months on the marijuana possession charge. All sentences are to run concurrently.

Also in county court, Brian Douglas Mark Roy, 22, of 2251 Belmont, was sentenced to four months after pleading guilty to trafficking in hashish.

The man admitted selling three grams of hashish to Froats in a transaction last August.

ITT Offer 'Improper'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Sen. Frank Church has concluded that International Telephone and Telegraph Co. improperly intervened in the 1970 Chilean election that put Salvador Allende in office.

Church's senate foreign relations subcommittee on multinational corporations brought to a close its first phase of a two-week investigation Monday by questioning ITT's president Harold S. Geneen.

Geneen testified the American corporation made a "dual purpose" offer of $1 million designed either to prevent Allende from winning the presidency or to woo him with "socially constructive" projects.

"Either of these, offered as it was, I think represents improper intervention in Chilean political affairs," Church said.

Church said Geneen's testimony had cleared up some earlier apparent contradictions by ITT officials that led Church to threaten perjury proceedings last week.

The ITT executive gingerly stepped around contradictions in previous testimony by ITT officials and other witnesses.

Geneen said he could not recall making an offer of a "substantial fund" to a top Central Intelligence Agency official, William Broe, in July, 1970 to finance an agency effort to stop Allende.

But he stipulated that he would accept Broe's sworn version of their conversation during a late evening meeting in Geneen's room at the Sheraton Carlton hotel here.

He said the offer to Broe might have been ill-advised, prompted by Geneen's "shock" at political developments in Chile, where he feared confiscation by the Allende government of ITT holdings.

The CIA declined his offer, he said, and the matter "died right there."

But the offer surfaced again in different form in September after Allende's popular election, Geneen conceded under questioning.

It came in the form of a proposal conveyed by ITT to national security adviser Henry Kissinger and Richard Helms, then head of the CIA, to donate "up to a million dollars" toward a plan to block Allende's confirmation by the Chilean congress.

CONSULTANT

Geneen's emissary this time was John McCone, Helms' former boss in the CIA, an ITT board member and also a CIA consultant.

McCone first disclosed the mission in earlier testimony to the senate investigators.

In earlier sessions ITT vice-president Edward Gerrity said Geneen's second offer of a fund "up to seven figures" was for some form of development aid in housing or agriculture.

On-Job Program Criticized

The widely-praised career and job exploration courses being developed in B.C. high schools have been criticized by Sooke school teacher Ken Warren.

Warren says the courses, which allow Grade 12 students to work in a chosen field for up to two weeks, hamper the employment possibilities of less - privileged occupational students.

"Who wants to hire slower kids if Grade 12 kids are going in there and are content to do so?" Warren asked.

He says he doesn't wish to rob the academic students of the opportunity for work experience, but says they should be restricted to investigating jobs which require Grade 12 graduation.

NO REPLY

Warren, a vocational and occupational teacher at Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School, says he has written to Education Minister Eileen Dailly complaining of the courses. He has received no reply.

"I know of three Grade 12 boys who worked two weeks carrying packages for a local firm," Warren said. "That's the kind of job an occupational student should have the opportunity of doing."

He said the occupational program was originally set up in B.C. schools to offer students who were less privileged academically to get into the job market.

"We had to have union sanction to do this and it took a long time to get it," Warren said.

"Now with Grade 12 students who learn these jobs in a day, going out there, the unions are going to become afraid and end work experience for everybody.

DEFEATS PURPOSE

"The Grade 12s already have the advantages and it will defeat the purpose of our occupational program if these kids with less educational qualifications don't get the advantage in more menial jobs."

Martlet Editorship Fight Is Over

This year's fight over the editorship of the Martlet, University of Victoria's student newspaper, has ended and David Climenhaga a third year philosophy and classics student, has emerged the winner.

Climenhaga's appointment was approved at a meeting of the Alma Mater Society's publications board Monday by a tie vote that was broken by the chairman, publications director Derry McDonell.

Present Martlet editor Dave Todd, who has opposed Climenhaga's nomination, had walked out of the meeting in protest with another board member, so was absent for the vote.

Climenhaga's appointment must still be ratified by the students' Representative Assembly this week, but McDonell doesn't think it will be challenged.

"They instructed us at the last RA meeting to come back with an editor," he said today.

One of Climenhaga's plans for the coming year is to get a special Martlet constitution that would end the fight over the appointment of an editor that has occurred for the last two years.

"It would make established practice official" regarding the Martlet and its editor, he said.

He said he plans to emphasize "good solid news reporting" in the Martlet, and hopes to get a broader and bigger staff for the paper.

For his year as editor he will get free tuition for five courses plus a minimum of $75 per issue of the paper.

This year's problems arose when the Martlet staff refused to endorse either of the two candidates, Climenghaga and Simon Gibson, who applied for the job. The Martlet staff has no official say in the choosing of a new editor, said McDonell, but in practice their choice has always been accepted by the publictions board.

The Martlet reopened nominations for the job by advertising it again in a special issue two weeks ago. Applications were received from two student editors in other provinces, plus two more UVic students.

All six applications were considered at the publications board meeting Monday.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Increased guerrilla activity in northeast Rhodesia has inspired a local golf club to add two new rules.

The first "allows a stroke to be played again if interrupted by gunfire or a sudden explosion."

The second rule requires players to examine the hole for land mines before putting.

Cheaper Pipeline Studied

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald revealed Monday that the federal government is considering a proposal by two Winnipeg men that could cut the cost of constructing a northern natural gas pipeline by half and save an estimated $2½ billion.

The two men, professional engineer Moses Dimentberg and Prof. Charles P. Bennett, contend that if the pipeline system was designed to transport natural gas in liquified rather than vapor form the $5 billion construction cost could be chopped in half.

They have formed a company, Liquefaction Ltd., and applied for a patent for their system which is explained to government officials in bulky and complex documents.

Macdonald revealed that the government is making "an appraisal on an interdepartmental basis" of the proposal following questions raised by Manitoba MP Doug Rowland (NDP — Selkirk).

ANTI-LITTER CAMPAIGN

Mayors in B.C. have been asked by Outdoors Unlittered to proclaim the week of May 6-12 as Anti-Litter Week within their community and to appoint a co-ordinator for the campaign.

Allard W. Van Veen, executive director, said service clubs and schools have also been asked to get involved in clean-ups and publicity campaigns.

"We realize that litter is a small link in the pollution chain," he said. "However small, litter-prevention can be used as a tool to make the individual say 'yes' to a totally clean environment."

Enforced Sterilization Of Native Women Denied

EDMONTON (CP) — Federal health officials have denied allegations that native women in the North are being sterilized against their will or without their knowledge of the implications.

Dr. Brian Brett, director of medical services for the northern region, said Monday sterilization is recommended only when it is considered medically unwise for a woman to have more children.

Indian women said on a CBC television program Sunday they had undergone sterilization operations in the Northwest Territories without understanding what the operations were for.

Dr. Brett said if sterilization isn't considered medically suitable, northern staff will attempt to have women use reversible forms of birth control.

Dr. Stephen Parlee, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Charles Camsell Hospital here, a federal hospital serving treaty Indians from the Northwest Territories and Alberta as well as Edmontonians, called the CBC program "irresponsible, mischievous . . . bad journalism."

Smoke Inhalation Caused Deaths

REGINA (CP) — Smoke inhalation caused the deaths of nine persons in an apartment fire here Feb. 25, says a pathologist's report presented Monday at a coroner's inquest into the tragedy.

Dr. Nevsat Bayko, a pathologist at Regina General Hospital, said he performed an autopsy on one body and examined the other eight. All suffered second-degree burns to 60 per cent of the body.

Towns Told to Stop Fighting

EDMONTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner urged Alberta towns Monday to "get off their fannies" and stop fighting among each other over where new industrial plants should go.

Instead, he told the legislature, towns should do their best to develop plants in their own communities "without being a dog in the manger about where a particular plant goes . . ."

Michener Opens Brandon Fair

BRANDON (CP) — Governor-General Roland Mitchener and six heavy horses officially opened Brandon's $5 million Keystone Centre and the 66th Royal Manitoba Winter Fair Monday night.

With the governor-general sharing the seat of a high-draft wagon, the high-tailed horses driven by Gordon Church of Leana, Man., walked through a red ribbon stretched across the Keystone arena and the multi-purpose agricultural and recreational facility was officially opened.

Treatment Plant for Weyburn

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — The city has received a $560,000 grant from the department of regional economic expansion for a water treatment plant, it was announced here.

Justice Minister Otto Lang said the grant, in addition to another for $260,000 to provide a similar facility at Swift Current, Sask., was the first 25 cities to receive assistance under the agricultural service centres plan.

BREAKFAST ODDITIES

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fancy some fried Chinese food for breakfast?

Or, alternatively, a bottle of coke, some chicken pizza and a chunk of steak . . . with a blob of chocolate ice cream to finish off.

Those are just some of the oddities British Columbia children eat for breakfast.

Ed Nelson (NDP — Burnaby-Seymour) conducted a survey in two schools in his riding to find out what children eat for breakfast.

Nelson found that socio-economic factors had little to do with the quality of breakfasts.

One school had a high population of lower income students, the other was in an upper income area. Basically, most children ate commercial cereals and milk for breakfast.

Some, however, said that during a period of one week they had eaten fried Chinese food, steak, chocolate ice cream and chicken pizza and cake.

The odd child ate nothing — or ate nothing at all except "a glass of water."

Eggs and bacon, waffles, fruit juice, flavored drinks and coffee were other popular meals.

Heaviest Pounding For Cambodia Reds

Times News Service

SAIGON — U.S. planes, including every available B-52 bomber in Southeast Asia, gave Communist forces in Cambodia their heavviest pounding of the war during the night as part of the U.S. campaign to force them into a ceasefire, reliable sources reported today.

The sources compared the bombing to the attacks on Hanoi and Haiphong last December that were aimed at forcing North Vietnam into a peace settlement.

But the Communists in Cambodia are widely dispersed and have none of the industrial concentrations vulnerable to air attack that the North Vietnamese had.

The sources said they were unable to say just how many strikes U.S. pilots flew or how many tons of bombs they dropped.

But they indicated about 120 B-52s were used in the attack, and that could mean a total of 3,600 tons of bombs dropped.

Military sources said some of the big bombers, along with F-111 fighter-bombers, supported Cambodian government troops advancing into the Kirirom plateau 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

The government troops are reported to have reached the plateau and found a deserted base camp of the Khmer Rouge.

But other government forces south of Phnom Penh continued to retreat and abandoned the garrison town of Chambak, 30 miles south of the capital.

In South Vietnam, the Saigon government continued to complain about the six-week-old Communist siege of the Tong Le Chan ranger camp 50 miles north of Saigon.

Meanwhile, President Nixon, winding up two days of talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu, appeared today to be backing away from a public military guarantee for South Vietnam despite his readiness to act against any new invasion by the North.

His remarks indicated he might decide to give a private commitment to President Thieu and publicly rest on his recent warnings of reprisals if Hanoi blatantly violates the ceasefire.

In Washington U.S. Defence Secretary Elliot Richardson repeated today if North Vietnam flagrantly violates the Indochina ceasefire, the United States might have to resume bombing in support of South Vietnamese troops.

Nixon needs no new authority from congress for such action, he added.

Richardson said he was confident South Vietnam would be able to provide for its own security in the near future, even if North Vietnam engages in a massive invasion.

But he said if violations of the truce continue and "if it were critical to the survival of South Vietnam," the United States might be forced into "the re-introduction of U.S. forces."

John Heine is a young cartoonist who is quickly gaining recognition for the individuality of his work. Two of his distinctive drawings, under the name "Maya", are in the Times on Page Five today and will be seen frequently in the future.

Maya is the Sanskrit word for illusion. Heine says he chose it because "it leaves my cartoon panel open for an infinity of ideas and keeps it from being clouded."

Amplifying in his own way on what he is trying to do, Heine sets his goal as, "to break through the cartoon bubble that has restricted thoughts for many years and expand it into a whole new bubble."

Second U.K. Mail Bombing

LONDON (Reuter) — A mail bomb exploded in a London post office today, the second such blast in four days in the city.

One man was taken to a hospital suffering from shock after the blast in a sorting office in West London.

A mail bomb damaged a room at a sorting office in Kilburn in North London last Saturday.

Britain's domestic news agency, the Press Association, said a man phoned a newspaper in Belfast claiming to represent an Irish republican group called "The Avengers," saying they were responsible for the two bombings.

Meanwhile, terrorists struck in Northern Ireland during the night, shooting one man dead and devastating the heart of a small country town with a powerful bomb.

In the neighboring Irish republic, teams of navy frogmen waited for the weather to clear before resuming an underwater search for the secrets of a ship said to have been running arms for the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The body of a man, about 25, was found early today sprawled in a ditch at the side of a road. Police said he had been shot in the head from close range.

Late Monday night 100 pounds of gelignite exploded in Dungiven, County Londonderry.

It caused widespread damage in the main street and wounded three girls who were hit by fragments of glass.

Meat Sales Off

Times News Services

Consumers appear to be biting into the week-long meat boycott with determination, throwing off meat sales by as much as 80 per cent in scores of supermarkets in the United States and in some parts of Canada and slicing some prices 29 cents a pound.

Mrs. Margaret Addis, leading the boycott in Victoria, said today she believes her group's plea is gaining support.

She increased to 2,000, her estimate of the number of area consumers who signed a petition supporting the boycott.

Consumer groups are urging that cottage cheese, fish, chicken and eggs be substituted for beef and fish retailers say the boycott is affecting sales.

Mrs. Janet Tubman, of Fisherman's Market on the Island Highway, reports sales went "way up" on the weekend, Monday and this morning.

"I've asked a few women, about 10 or so, if it's because of the meat boycott and they say yes," she said.

BUYING FISH

"'They've been buying enough fish to last the whole week."

"It's like my meat had some disease; nobody'll even touch it," complained a meat manager in the New York City area, where a check of supermarkets showed the boycott to be about 80 per cent effective on the first shopping day Monday

Siouxland Beef Processors closed their plants temporarily in Fargo, N.D., Omaha, Neb., and Sioux City, Iowa. They said they wanted to determine what effect the boycott would have.

Standard Beef Inc. of Detroit, which normally processes 150 to 200 cattle a day, was handling only 100 to 125. Meat packers across Michigan reported orders down 25 per cent.

About 500 butchers were laid off by Cincinnati packing houses. In Cleveland, about 200 meat cutters were out of work Monday.

In Washington, Safeway Stores laid off 50 of its 300 meat cutters. Giant Food stores laid off part-time meat cutters and transferred a number of regular butchers to other departments of the supermarket.

About price declines, Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, minimized the impact.

"I don't think the boycott activity of these activities amounts to a mammary gland on a mudworm," Adamy said. Meat demand started dropping six weeks ago, he said, as consumers began resisting higher prices.

Operation Nasty Deal
Nasty Deal for Hans

Hans Gajowski was quietly doing his job Monday afternoon when he was arrested and held at gunpoint for nearly two hours by uniformed Canadian military personnel.

He and his partner Joe Macerias ran afoul of an exercise named Nasty Deal, designed to train servicemen to combat civil strife.

Gajowski and Macerias work for Chew Excavating Ltd. and were doing a routine check of a pumping station at CFB Esquimalt. They had been admitted to the base without passes since their work truck was all the identification they needed.

When they put down their tools for a coffee break at 2 p.m. and returned to their truck, they were approached by "six or eight people fully dressed in military uniform."

At first the military men said it was "okay" that the workmen didn't have any identification passes.

"But when we finished our break and came out (of the truck), a big man with a gun jumped out," Gajowski said. "He said stop and put your hands in the air."

The two workmen were marched at gunpoint up to a large training hall where they were forced to stand with their hands against the wall and told not to move or talk.

"The rifles were always pointed at us," Gajowski said.

"And one man said 'watch out for weapons' — we both heard him."

Gajowski said they had to stand against the wall for about 15 minutes.

"I don't know what they were doing. I told them I wanted to talk to a navy MP (military policeman) who would know who we were," Gajowski said, "but they wouldn't let us."

The two workmen were then marched, again at gunpoint and surrounded by the uniformed guards, to the main gate where the commissionaire told them the MPs were at another gate.

The march then continued down to the other gate where the two men were held outside a building.

"The men went inside and talked to the MP while we waited," Gajowski said. "Then they took off and we were allowed to see the MP and he phoned Chew Excavating."

The company confirmed who the men were and the MP issued them each a special pass and allowed them to leave.

B.C. Gets Can-Cel For Debts

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government announced Monday it has established itself in the pulp industry, through acquisition of controlling interest in the operations of Columbia Cellulose Ltd., a major pulp-producing concern in the province.

The agreement was made public in the legislature by Resources Minister Bob Williams.

Seventy-nine per cent of the assets of Canadian Cellulose — the principal operating subsidiary of Colcel — will go to the province in exchange for the province guaranteeing long-term debts amounting to about $70.5 million which are owed by Canadian Cellulose to bondholders, banks and investors.

The agreement was concluded primarily between the provincial government and the Celanese Corporation, the American parent firm of Columbia Cellulose.

As part of the agreement, a debt of $73 million, which was owned by Canadian Cellulose to the Celanese Corporation, will be written off.

Williams said the release of the debt to the parent company will put Canadian Cellulose in a better economic position.

The government's interest in Canadian Cellulose will be managed by a proposed new crown corporation to be called British Columbia Cellulose Limited.

Legislation creating the corporation and authorizing the government to enter into the agreement will be passed by the legislature this spring, Williams said.

The legislation has not yet been introduced.

Columbia Cellulose is reported to have lost about $100 million in its B.C. operations since 1966.

The parent company — Celanese — has been interested in selling out since 1968.

As part of the agreement, the government will assume control through its 79 per cent interest in all the pulp-producing operations of Columbia Cellulose in B.C.

These include the profitable operations located in the Castlegar area, known as Celgar.

It had been the intention of Columbia Cellulose to sell its Celgar operations to the giant American Weyerhaeuser Corporation last year. But the sale was blocked by Williams

BANKS SPECULATED DURING $ CRISIS

WASHINGTON (WP) — American commercial banks were "significant participants" in the "sizeable outflows of funds from the U.S." during the intense speculation on the dollar which led to its Feb. 12 devaluation, U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew Brimmer said Monday.

Brimmer, in a speech to the Bankers' Association for Foreign Trade in Boca Raton, Fla., said that there is not enough detailed information to "appraise the part they played," but said available date persuades "one that their participation was by no means trivial."

Intense speculation against the dollar in late January and early February led to a 10 per cent dollar devaluation on Feb. 12. Despite the devaluation, speculation continued and by last month most of the major world economic powers floated their currencies.

Brimmer, whose text was released here, said that U.S. banks "contributed on balance some $2.5 billion to the volume of funds which moved abroad in connection with the exchange rate speculation earlier this year."

Ocean Falls Humming

Ocean Falls, the newly-acquired government mill town in northern B.C., is making paper ahead of schedule and drawing back many former employees.

Production was due to start in May but officials decided to keep one of the paper machines going following the former owner's official departure at the end of March.

A bill setting out the government acquisition procedure was introduced in the legislature Monday. (See Page 3.)

Ted Vesak, the appointed manager, explained in an interview today that most employee needs are being met.

Of former employees, 90 are staying on. Another 32 who left after Crown Zellerbach announced its pull-out last April have applied to return. And another 43 former employees have also applied. Beyond that there are 200 applications from people elsewhere in the province.

There are also 20 student workers employed.

"We are much farther along than anybody ever hoped for," Vesak said.

He added, however, that some senior paper makers, welders and pipefitters will be required to complete employee requirements.

The whole town is run through its one industry and to keep non-mill operations functioning, it was necessary to keep the steam plant running. Therefore it was decided to keep one of the paper machines running, Vesak said.

He anticipates that one of the newsprint machines will begin operating in May, and the other sometime following that. The company has orders for the paper in B.C. and is receiving raw materials.

The town's hospital and hotel are operating, Pacific Western Airlines and Northland Navigation are supplying the town, and other services are running normally, Vesak said.

HEAL WOUNDS URGES PoW

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The senior U.S. civilian prisoner-of-war, who spent 4½ years in solitary confinement, called Monday for compassionate aid to "heal the wounds" of both sides in Vietnam.

Philip Manhard, 51, and a veteran diplomat, told a state department news conference he experienced some of the same mistreatment and torture now being described by fellow PoWs.

But while the tales of ordeals have stimulated new opposition to post-war aid for North Vietnam, Manhard urged the opposite course.

"I was mistreated, I was tortured — but only once for about 15 hours" when he was trussed over a cross-beam to force him to talk, he said.

Manhard said he also suffered a serious digestive problem for three years from inadequate nourishment.

Nevertheless, speaking as a citizen and not "a bureaucrat," Manhard said, "our best interests lie in trying to do what we reasonably can to establish a period of what I call genuine, stable, peaceful co-existence" in Vietnam.

The "Vietnamese people in general," he said, "have suffered a great deal — from everybody."

America's traditional "generosity and forgiveness," Manhard said, "should go beyond ideological boundaries and the hardships of the past" to help repair "the tremendous amount of damage" on both sides of the struggle.

Manhard, on his first trip to the state department from Bethesda Naval Hospital where he is still under treatment, said he is too much out of touch with events to speak of sums of money or types of aid.

U.S. Shares Bought Out

CALGARY (CP) — Paramount Life Insurance Company of Calgary became a fully Canadian-owned company last week with the purchase of shares held by a United States firm.

Alberta officers and directors of the company paid $716,875 to American Western Life Insurance Co. of Utah for 62,068 shares or 49.9 per cent of those issued.

President and general manager Karl Bodon said the U.S. firm gave invaluable assistance when Paramount was formed in 1966 but lately the tie with American Western had dampened enthusiasm and slowed sales.

Paramount received $650,000 in premiums in 1971 and $250,000 last year. Bodon predicted sales of $600,000 or more this year.

Paramount is the largest of four insurance companies based in Alberta.

Trade Visit

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian suppliers of food products, textiles, printing and vacuum plating machinery are being sought by a Hong Kong trade mission, its officials said.

The 13-company group has already visited Vancouver and Montreal and will also go to Toronto.

A spokesman said Hong Kong exports to Canada during the first nine months of 1972 rose 12 per cent from a year earlier to $68.5 million. Re-exports of assembled goods amounted to another $5.3 million.

Imports into Hong Kong from Canada were $16.8 million. Main Canadian items to the Crown colony were paper and paperboard, aluminum and regenerated and cellulose plastic materials.

Singer to Sue On Drug Charge

LONDON (Reuter) — British pop star Englebert Humperdinck says he will seek an apology from the Venezuelan embassy here over his detention in Caracas on suspicion of possessing drugs.

Arriving back in London after his tour of the United States and Latin America, the singer said of Venezuela: "I certainly don't advise anyone to go on vacation there."

Humperdink was in jail for more than three hours while Venezuelan officials carried out dope tests on a package of vitamin pills he was carrying.

He was released when the tests revealed the pills were not illegal drugs.

Lennon Appeals Extradition

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Former Beatle John Lennon and his wife Yoko Ono Monday filed an appeal against a U.S. immigration department decision to deny Lennon permanent resident status on grounds that he was convicted on a hashish charge in Britian in 1968, their lawyer announced.

The Lennons applied for residence to continue the search for Mrs. Lennon's daughter by a former marriage, 10-year-old Kyoko Cox, whose father has refused to give Mrs. Lennon court-ordered custody of the child.

New York

New York prices drifted lower again and brokers pinned the retreat on the same old combination of factors: Concern over the economy, inflation and the international monetary situation.

The blue-chip Dow Jones index lost almost 24 points in the last two sessions, almost eradicating the 35-point rally it scored last week.

Declines held more than a two-to-one lead over advances in fairly light trading.

Martin Marietta, off ¼ to $17¾ on heavy institutional dealing led the active issues on the NYSE. ITT, the second-most-active, was off 1⅛ to $41⅝, and Proctor and Gamble, in the No. 3 spot, was up ⅛ to $94⅝.

The Financial Times index was up 5.5 points to 461.7.

Value of shares of British Petroleum lost about $72 million following a setback Monday in plans to build the trans-Alaska pipeline. BP is the only non-American company with a stake in the Alaska oilfield.

Oak Bay Council To Send Amorous Sea Lions Under Cover

Spring fever and the vocalizing that accompanies it among sea lions will bring changes at Oak Bay Marina's Sealand.

Oak Bay council Monday gave Sealand president Bob Wright permission to build a covered pool for the Steller sea lion, Benjamin, which will be placed between the present sea lions' pool and the whale pool, which will be extended 24 feet north.

Approval was given despite vigorous opposition by Ald. Douglas McLelland.

Wright told council he wanted to build the pool as a "good neighbor gesture" to nearby residents who might be disturbed by the California sea lions who, "like the birds and bees will turn to amorous thoughts, which will surely make them more vocal."

McLelland said building the new pool was like "putting a band-aid on" the noise pollution problem and suggested the original agreement drawn up between the marina and council did not include Sealand.

Wright said this was not so and that a bylaw had also been drafted between his company and council.

The development north of the present whale pool he said, was well within foreshore rights.

He reminded McLelland that at McLelland's insistence he had agreed to give up any rights of developing outside his present foreshore leases when council approved the extension of the marina's breakwater.

Ald. Brian Smith said, "This so-called addition to the marina, as I see it, is obviously designed to prevent noise pollution. Rather than ham-stringing Mr. Wright, I would like to encourage him."

Ald. John Goult praised Wright for his "good neighbor policy."

McLelland was the only alderman to vote against approval of the sea lion pool, which will be built before the mating season gets in full swing.

Inter-Island Council Proposed

An inter-island council may be needed as the vehicle for exchanging information and ideas among residents of all the Gulf Islands, Hugh Curtis (PC — Saanich and The Islands) told the legislature's standing committee on municipal matters today.

His comment arose out of a complaint by Denman island resident Robin Newton that there is little real communication between the islands and therefore little opportunity for Denman Islanders to find out what the legislature's committee is attempting to do and what other communities have already done in terms of protecting and preserving their own environment.

After Peter Rolston (NDP — Dewdney) told Newton that part of the problem he mentioned was "you are too isolated," Curtis said he had become aware of that attitude among many residents of the islands located off the east side of Vancouver Island from Victoria north.

Curtis said the inter-island council could be as formally or as informally structured as the islanders themselves desire. It could provide an interchange of information on ferry services, roads and other matters of common concern.

At present, he said, there is a tendency to adopt a too insular and introspective view of issues.

Other members agreed with Curtis that the basic problem of lack of communication doesn't come within the committee's terms of reference. Gerry Anderson (NDP — Kamloops) urged Newton to go back to Denman, contact other residents and formulate a community point of view which could be submitted when the committee visits the island later this year.

Newton said one of the main concerns of the island's 300 residents is to see an end to all commercial logging and the logging lands placed under some reserve category, possibly by the proposed land commission.

"Half of the island is owned by the logging companies which is a trauma to us," he said.

THINGS GROW in spring sunshine but from two feet to four? That's carrying Victoria's time-honored reputation for fertility too far. Actually, it can all be explained. Grass on the UVic campus is warm and inviting these days and studying for exams can leave a fellow weary. In this case, the prospect of a little doze in the sun attracted two, one obviously smaller than the other.

Elevator Men End Dispute In Province

The 30-week strike by 200 elevator installers and repairmen in British Columbia came to an end today.

Members of Local 82 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, on strike against five companies, began returning to work.

Representatives of the union and the companies met Labor Minister Bill King in his office this morning and the first negotiating meeting was to be held in the afternoon to try to resolve the dispute.

Union members went on strike across the country seven months ago in a contract dispute involving new technology and prefabrication of elevators.

Workers in other provinces began returning to work more than a week ago when the Ontario legislature ordered compulsory arbitration of the dispute.

In B.C., the Supreme Court ruled the strike illegal but the men refused to return to work because they said individual damage suits were launched against them.

In Victoria, Montgomery Elevator, which employs 17 of the 23 union members, reported an 85 per cent return to work today.

BIG BACKLOG

Manager C. S. Dumaresq said there is a heavy backlog of work.

John Neil, western representative of the union, said he expects it will be several days before there is a complete return to work.

King told reporters after he met both sides that mediation officer Gus Leonidas has been assigned to assist the parties.

He said there had been no collective bargaining in B.C. to this point "and this is what we are getting under way now."

He said negotiations had been on a national basis because it was a national agreement involved.

These talks were conducted in Ontario and until it "became apparent that Ontario was unable to come up with an agreement that would be instituted in all the other provinces, it was virtually impossible for the other provinces to intervene."

Neil said journeymen installers will get an interim 61-cent pay increase, to $7.12 an hour, but other conditions are unchanged pending mediation.

B.C. courts held that the strike was illegal because the union never attempted to bargain a contract within B.C. If the union had bargained locally and reached an impasse, then the strike would have been legal.

'Mad Hatter' Idea Blasted

A plan to build a $5 million convention centre complex opposite the Legislative Buildings was described today as a "Mad Hatter's tea party" by Mayor Peter Pollen.

The proposed complex would include hotel rooms, an auditorium for 200 people, an art gallery, and satellite facilities, according to one of the businessmen behind the plan Dr. Harne Lane, president of Royal London Wax Museum.

The new centre would occupy the present site of the wax museum at 470 Belleville Street. The property is owned by Marathon Realty, Vancouver, a subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Lane was unwilling to discuss the centre, the people involved or the height of the proposed building, but said "we will be going underground for parking."

He said two companies are involved in the plan. Financing will come "basically from Victoria, although there is potential for outside money."

Lane said his group has not yet placed a proposal before city council but had approached aldermen "informally."

Pollen said he had heard of the plan and considers a convention centre in front of the legislature "the height of lunacy."

He compared the plan to the Mad Hatter's tea party and said those involved should "get the top off the teapot and come before city council with a decent proposal."

Propane Trial Urged For Four City Vehicles

Victoria city council's public works committee recommended today that council put four of its service vehicles on a 90-day trial using propane gas.

Bill Price, of Cigas Products Ltd., said the trial would cost the city nothing but the price of the fuel used.

A reduction in provincial taxes introduced by the NDP government comes into effect next month, putting the highest cost of propane per gallon at 24.5 cents plus 10 cents tax. Bulk purchases would reduce the cost to some extent.

Price told a council committee propane gave better mileage than vehicles with the increasingly inefficient emission control equipment needed for regular gasoline.

He said further reductions in the efficiency of normal gas engines would come with U.S. 1975 emission standards. He said the purchaser of a car in that year would pay $700 for emission control equipment.

Propane, produced in B.C., used as a fuel reduces emission of pollutants by up to 70 per cent, Price said.

Engines wear better, maintenance costs are lower and mileage improves, he said, although the fuel is not yet being pushed for private car owners because propane stations, of which there are few, do not have proper measuring equipment.

Under the deal being recommended to the city, Cigas will set up a fueling station in the public works yard. Trucks will be fitted with propane pressure tanks which have a valve that closes automatically in case of rupture of the fuel line.

Price said he had never heard of a fire or explosion occurring in an accident involving a propane-powered vehicle.

The city has 200 vehicles. Some major haulers in Vancouver, among them Johnson Terminals Ltd., have recently introduced fleets of propane-powered trucks.

HAPPY HOOKER GETS WELCOME

The Happy Hooker is welcome to take her place on Greater Victoria bookstore shelves, according to police in Saanich, Oak Bay and Victoria.

The controversial biography of reformed prostitute Xavier Hollander, currently facing police action in Toronto, has not been the source of any complaints in this area, says Victoria's Chief J. F. Gregory.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald was asked in the legislature Monday to check allegations that Victoria police were removing the book from local stores.

A Saanich spokesman said he hadn't heard of any complaints, but assumed "it must be a good book" if there was a question raised about it in the legislature.

Oak Bay police chief John Green said there have been no complaints.

"The book stores here don't carry the book," he added.

Health Permits Mailed to Cafes

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer today said that permits now required by eating places under changes in the Health Act have been put in the mail to most of them.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said some of the establishments will have received interim permits, giving them time to meet more stringent public health standards.

Others have not been dealt with yet but there is no need for operators without a permit to become alarmed. Their situation will be evaluated in due course, he said.

The new regulations became effective April 1 and under them, all 378 public eating places between Port Renfrew and the Gulf Islands require a permit signed by Whitbread.

The permit depends on operators meeting public health requirements spelled out in more detail in the new regulations.

Requirements relating to washrooms and dish-washing equipment are expected to force some of the smaller operations out of business eventually.

Man Remanded On Murder Count

Victoria's first capital murder charge in five years was read in provincial court today against a 42-year-old Victoria man charged in a March 14 stabbing death.

Roydon Gaylord Morrison, 132 Dallas, was originally charged with the non-capital murder of Wallace Omar Stevenson, 51, a fellow resident at the Dallas Road boarding house for alcoholics.

A preliminary hearing into the non-capital murder charge has already been set for June 11, 12 and 13. The charge was remanded to April 10 to fix a day for a hearing.

The last capital murder charge in Victoria was laid five years ago, against Orlando Trozzo, in the shooting of another man. Trozzo was later given seven years on a reduced charge.

The last execution in British Columbia was 12 years ago. The last in Canada took place in Ontario in 1961.

Six years later, Ottawa suspended the death penalty for all but the killings of police officers and prison guards. That five-year experimental suspension ended this year and so far has not been replaced by new legislation.

Pre-Booking Plan For Golf Course

A new way to ration time at municipally-owned Cedar Hill golf course is being considered by the course management committee to relieve congestion.

Saanich alderman William Noel, a member of the management committee, said a system of pre-booking all golfing time will be discussed at the committee's next meeting later this month.

The Saanich course, purchased as part of the McRae estate for $1.2 million in 1967, is the only publicly-owned golf course on Vancouver Island and is heavily patronized by golfers who are not members of private clubs.

Three types of player use the course: members of Cedar Hill Golf Club, season pass holders, and random golfers.

Noel estimates a 15 per cent increase in course usage this year. There are too many club members for a small course, he said.

Although 18 holes long, Cedar Hill is shorter and has a lower par than many courses.

Mrs. Florence Genn, secretary of Cedar Hill Golf Club, said some members have quit because they've had to wait an hour or more to tee off.

She said if Cedar Hill is to be a public course fewer season passes should be sold and club membership reduced to make more time available for "green fee players," or the public at large dropping by for a game at random.

The club limits membership to 450 men, 125 women and 50 juniors. There are now 410, 121 and 50.

The pre-booking system is used currently only for weekend golf when demand is heaviest.

And Now a Starveathon

After an endless stream of walkathons, bikeathons and wakeathons a Canadian Christian organization has come up with a new idea for Easter — a starveathon.

World Vision of Canada, an interdenominational missionary organization, is planning a 40-hour famine to raise money for the earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

Estimating that 17,200 people die every 40 hours of unidentified causes, largely attributed to malnutrition, the organization hopes to enlist 10,000 people across Canada to each raise $17.20 for the cause.

That would require each participant to be sponsored for 43 cents an hour and would mean raising a total of $172,000.

The famine is scheduled from 8 p.m. April 19 to noon April 21.

In Victoria, Emmanuel Baptist Church is sponsoring the famine. An organizational meeting with representatives of World Vision is planned for April 5.

Spokesmen say they hope participants will be together during the famine, but some people will have to fast at home.

World Vision is an international organization which began in the U.S. after the Second World War.

Fairfield Residents Alerted Against Repair Swindlers

Better Business Bureau director Bill Tindall suspects there is a ring of swindlers in the city operating a home repairs racket.

The ring was operating in the Fairfield area Monday, said Tindall, knocking on people's doors and offering to make repairs on their chimneys, roofs and gutters.

One woman was told her chimney was in a really dangerous condition and could be repaired for $240, he said.

"This was sheer nonsense," said Tindall.

The ring is probably people from the Mainland, said Tindall, but someone is supplying them with lists of prospective "customers", people who have had home repairs in the last year or so.

He suspects that a few people in the home repair business locally are selling their lists of customers to other people in the business, and getting a kickback on deals made.

One elderly man paid $1,200 for home repairs this year to one of these shady operators, said Tindall. An appraisal later by a reputable firm showed the repairs amounted to $150.

The swindlers often paint a "disaster situation", he said, telling the prospective customer that his roof or gutters must be fixed immediately.

Anyone approached on a direct basis for home repairs should demand to see the man's trades licence, should get a contract stating a fixed price and itemizing the work to be done, and should refuse to pay in advance, said Tindall.

WALTERS ACQUITTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lyman Walters, vice-president of the firm that owns the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, was acquitted Monday on a charge of issuing a false prospectus in the fall of 1970 with the intent to induce the public to buy shares in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd.

The British Columbia Supreme Court jury returned the verdict after being told by Mr. Justice Harry McKay that there was no evidence on which they could reasonably bring in a finding of guilty.

The judge directed the jury to acquit Walters, vice-president of Medical Investment Corp. (Medicor) of Minneapolis and its Northwest Sports subsidiary, following a motion by defence counsel Allan McEachern.

Walters, wearing a blue blazer with a Canucks' badge on his lapel, shook hands with all three defence lawyers at the trial and kissed a young woman assisting in his case.

CHARGED JOINTLY

The trial of Tom Scallen, president of both Medicor and Northwest, who was charged jointly with Walters, continues today.

Scallen is also charged with theft of $3 million by converting money belonging to Northwest Sports to the use of Medicor.

In earlier testimony Monday, industrialist Frank McMahon said that the chance of the team's becoming a financial success when it entered the NHL for the 1970-71 season was about as good as that of a mule winning the Kentucky Derby.

McMahon has owned one derby winner.

McMahon said he took no active part in the affairs of Northwest Sports in 1970, although he was on the board of directors.

He said he had no knowledge of a transaction in which the prosecution alleges the $3 million was converted for Medicor's use and did not authorize the transaction in any way.

McMahon, a Vancouver millionaire, said he attended no directors' meetings in 1970, although he was active in the company before then.

DID NOT HELP

He also said he did not participate in negotiations leading to an offering of Northwest Sports shares to the public in late 1970 and had nothing to do with the preparation of a prospectus for the share offering.

He said he first learned of the $3 million transaction in April or May of 1971.

Under cross-examination by Peter Butler, defence counsel for Walters, McMahon said the $9 million paid for the Canucks to get into the NHL might never be recovered.

The crown concluded its case with the reading of testimony from a preliminary hearing into the charges by Coleman E. Hall, another Northwest Sports director.

Hall is now recuperating from a back operation in Hawaii.

Councillors Grudgingly Cut Budget

Camosun College councillors Monday agreed grudgingly to reduce the 1973-74 college budget to $4,084,316.

The councillors were informed by college principal Grant Fisher that the department of education had instructed them to slash the vocational portion of their original $4,254,980 budget by $200,000.

They decided instead to resubmit the budget with only $170,664 in reductions and hope the department would accept it.

The total budget as approved for re-submission represents $2,497,306 for non-vocational programs and $1,587,010 for vocational programs.

Greater Victoria School District's share of the budget is $391,157, which means the cost to the local taxpayer will be about .91 mills—up from .79 mills last year.

The remainder of the budget is paid by the provincial and federal governments, by revenue from tuition fees and services and by budget surplus from last year.

More than half the budget cuts agreed to by the councillors involve cancelling additional staff intended to teach new vocational courses.

One of the new courses which cannot be funded within this budget is the dental assistant program.

Fisher explained, however, that some new courses might still be offered if funding can be obtained from other sources, including other provincial agencies and the federal department of manpower.

He said the department requested the budget cut because the total budget of all provincial colleges was $3 million higher than the government had budgeted for.

Two other areas reduced in the vocational budget were the community services portion (which Fisher said might be compensated by increasing the revenue accruing to the night school division) and the salaries and fringe benefits portion.

The $28,200 cut in salaries and benefits will be met by reducing the staff salary increase for 1973-74 to seven per cent, instead of 10 per cent.

Fisher said the department agreed to pay the difference if salary increases turn out to be higher than the budget forecast.

Another $14,800 was pared from the amount budgetted for training materials.

Director of trades and industrial training at the college, John Drysdale, said he didn't know if the reductions "hit like lightning or a heavy hammer.

"It won't be easy now, certainly not," he said, "but we'll just have to get by."

City College May Start Its Own Day Care Centre

Day-care facilities may soon be established at Camosun College.

The college council agreed Monday to set up a committee to assess the needs and determine the feasibility of establishing a day-care centre at the college.

★ ★ ★

The motion was first submitted by councillor Gerry Tromp who said day-care services would allow many mothers to further their education and would provide a community service "in line with the philosophy of a community college."

She said she worked at a day-care facility where many students brought their children but she thought a centre at Camosun would be more beneficial and perhaps lead to the development of a child study centre.

College principal Grant Fisher said some studies had been done at the school last year on the need for day-care services.

"At that time we discovered people attending the college then wouldn't use the facility," Fisher said. "They preferred to use day-care centres close to their homes.

★ ★ ★

"We also discovered day-care facilities at UVic were working at half capacity, so we decided those who wanted day-care should use the UVic facility."

The councillors agreed that while they couldn't go ahead with Tromp's concrete proposal for establishing a centre, a committee should be set up to assess the present need for day-care at the college.

SFU Food Outlets Picketed In Protest Over Prices

VANCOUVER (CP) — Students at Simon Fraser University threw up picket lines at three of the university's five food outlets Monday to protest high food prices.

Student spokesman Bill Birge said the boycott was instituted because a recent price increase was applied more heavily to lower-cost items such as hamburgers and hot dogs than higher-priced meals.

George Stuart, the university's vice-president of administration, said the price boost was needed to reduce a deficit in food services. He said a $60,000 deficit is estimated for the financial year ending April 30.

Stuart said next year's deficit, even with the price increases, will still be $40,000.

Birge said the boycott is very successfull and picketing will be expanded today to include all five food outlets.

Trustees Protest

PENTICTON (CP) — The Penticton district school board voted Monday to ask the British Columbia School Trustees Association to make protest to the provincial government against the proposed offical disclosure bill, which would require all persons holding public office to reveal business interests they or other members of their immediate family had.

Engineer Fired

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian National Railways has dismissed a second employee in the continuing dispute between the railway and members of the United Transportation Union.

Lorne Vandevoord, an engineer with the CNR for 21 years, was dismissed after a company investigation gave him 30 demerit points for falsifying a time sheet.

The 30 points gave Vandevoord more than 60, the allowable limit for operating employees.

Mine Walkout

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Workers on the afternoon shift at Cominco Ltd.'s Sullivan Mine operations here joined a walkout begun in the day shift Monday to protest what they claimed were dangerous gas levels in the mine.

The men walked off the job at the lead-zinc mine, claiming levels of sulphur dioxide in the mine were 200 times above recommended levels.

Shooter Sought

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Police Monday were looking for a man who shot Deborah Robertson, 16, when she refused his offer on a ride. She said the man was about 26 years old, of medium build, with curly brown hair and long sideburns. Miss Robertson was still in hospital Monday recovering from surgery to remove the bullet.

Smoking Allowed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver school board voted Monday to allow grade 11 and 12 students at Eric Hamber Secondary to smoke on school grounds during a one-month trial period. Board members said they realized smoking was a health hazard, but said it is also part of student life. The proposal originated with the school's student council.

More Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police records for March reveal 256 drinking driving charges were laid and 478 motorists were given 24-hour suspensions. By the end of March, 1,937 motorists had come into contact with police on drinking offences in 1973, compared with 960 in the first three months of 1972.

Two File

LANGLEY (CP) — J. H. Yonder, 56, an insurance agent, and Aubrey Searle, 37, a B.C. Hydro sales representative, Monday filed nomination papers for an aldermanic byelection here April 14 to replace Social Credit MLA Bob McClelland, who resigned as alderman last month.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 27-year-old Hawaii man who told Victoria provincial court Monday he had been given some marijuana by a motorist for fixing the man's tire was fined $75 by Judge William Ostler.

Charles Lewis Best was a passenger in a car that was stopped Saturday night on Douglas.

During a police search, a small quantity of marijuana was found in his pocket. The man admitted ownership and knowledge of the drug, but said it had been given to him by another person whose flat tire he had repaired.

A 19-year-old man who pleaded guilty to possession of cannabis sativa was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation.

Timothy Wayne Engstrom, of no fixed address, ran from police officers who stopped him on Douglas early Saturday.

A piece of tinfoil, containing 25 marijuana seeds, was found in his pocket.

★ ★ ★

Mark Christopher Shore, 18, of 927 Collinson, was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Shore was searched in Victoria police headquarters on another matter when a marijuana joint was found in his shirt pocket.

A 19-year-old woman who tried to get a refund on a Woolco sweater she admitted she thought "might be stolen" was given a suspended sentence and placed on nine months' probation for possession under $200.

Barbara Wendy Reynolds, 1465 Edgeware admitted trying to get a refund on the $14.95 sweater March 24. She told Woolco security staff she got the sweater from a friend, later admitting she suspected it might have been stolen.

In traffic court, two men were each fined $350 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Simon Faulkner, 20, of 3422 Calumet, was stopped Saturday night and Stephen Anthony Carter, 19, of 2880 Lansdowne, was stopped Friday night.

Neil David Weaver, 19, of 7-1830 Old Island Highway, was fined $350 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content of over .08. Weaver had been stopped late Friday.

Robert J. Bourgeois, 23, of 102-535 Niagara, pleaded guilty Saturday to indecent assault on a female.

He was remanded until April 10 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

The court was told Bourgeois picked up a 23-year-old woman hitch-hiking on Fort Street and drove to the 900 block St. Charles Street where he stopped his car and assaulted her.

She managed to open the door of the car and escape. Later she identified the accused in a police line-up.

In Sidney provincial court Monday, a 41-year-old Sidney man, charged with impaired driving and criminal negligence causing death, was committed for trial in a higher court after a preliminary hearing before Judge D. G. Ashby.

An inquest into the death was waived after a decision to lay the charges was made, Sidney RCMP said.

Oak Bay Council To Send Amorous Sea Lions Under Cover

Spring fever and the vocalizing that accompanies it among sea lions will bring changes at Oak Bay Marina's Sealand.

Oak Bay council Monday gave Sealand president Bob Wright permission to build a covered pool for the Steller sea lion, Benjamin, which will be placed between the present sea lions' pool and the whale pool, which will be extended 24 feet north.

Approval was given despite vigorous opposition by Ald. Douglas McLelland.

Wright told council he wanted to build the pool as a "good neighbor gesture" to nearby residents who might be disturbed by the California sea lions who "like the birds and bees will turn to amorous thoughts, which will surely make them more vocal."

McLelland said building the new pool was like "putting a band-aid on" the noise pollution problem and suggested the original agreement drawn up between the marina and council did not include Sealand.

Wright said this was not so and that a bylaw had also been drafted between his company and council.

The development north of the present whale pool he said, was well within foreshore rights.

He reminded McLelland that at McLelland's insistence he had agreed to give up any rights of developing outside his present foreshore leases when council approved the extension of the marina's breakwater.

Ald. Brian Smith said, "This so-called addition to the marina, as I see it, is obviously designed to prevent noise pollution. Rather than ham-stringing Mr. Wright, I would like to encourage him."

Ald. John Goult praised Wright for his "good neighbor policy."

McLelland was the only alderman to vote against approval of the sea lion pool, which will be built before the mating season gets in full swing.

'Good neighbor gesture' to benefit noisy sea lions

Inter-Island Council Proposed

An inter-island council may be needed as the vehicle for exchanging information and ideas among residents of all the Gulf Islands, Hugh Curtis (PC — Saanich and The Islands) told the legislature's standing committee on municipal matters today.

His comment arose out of a complaint by Denman island resident Robin Newton that there is little real communication between the islands and therefore little opportunity for Denman Islanders to find out what the legislature's committee is attempting to do and what other communities have already done in terms of protecting and preserving their own environment.

After Peter Rolston (NDP — Dewdney) told Newton that part of the problem he mentioned was "you are too isolated," Curtis said he had become aware of that attitude among many residents of the islands located off the east side of Vancouver Island from Victoria north.

Curtis said the inter-island council could be as formally or as informally structured as the islanders themselves desire. It could provide an interchange of information on ferry services, roads and other matters of common concern.

At present, he said, there is a tendency to adopt a too insular and introspective view of issues.

Other members agreed with Curtis that the basic problem of lack of communication doesn't come within the committee's terms of reference. Gerry Anderson (NDP — Kamloops) urged Newton to go back to Denman, contact other residents and formulate a community point of view which could be submitted when the committee visits the island later this year.

Newton said one of the main concerns of the island's 300 residents is to see an end to all commercial logging and the logging lands placed under some reserve category, possibly by the proposed land commission.

"Half of the island is owned by the logging companies which is a trauma to us," he said.

THINGS GROW in spring sunshine but from two feet to four? That's carrying Victoria's time-honored reputation for fertility too far. Actually, it can all be explained. Grass on the UVic campus is warm and inviting these days and studying for exams can leave a fellow weary. In this case, the prospect of a little doze in the sun attracted two, one obviously smaller than the other.

Elevator Men End Dispute In Province

The 30-week strike by 200 elevator installers and repairmen in British Columbia came to an end today.

Members of Local 82 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, on strike against five companies, began returning to work.

Representatives of the union and the companies met Labor Minister Bill King in his office this morning and the first negotiating meeting was to be held in the afternoon to try to resolve the dispute.

Union members went on strike across the country seven months ago in a contract dispute involving new technology and prefabrication of elevators.

Workers in other provinces began returning to work more than a week ago when the Ontario legislature ordered compulsory arbitration of the dispute.

In B.C., the Supreme Court ruled the strike illegal but the men refused to return to work because they said individual damage suits were launched against them.

In Victoria, Montgomery Elevator, which employs 17 of the 23 union members, reported an 85 per cent return to work today.

BIG BACKLOG

Manager C. S. Dumaresq said there is a heavy backlog of work.

John Neil, western representative of the union, said he expects it will be several days before there is a complete return to work.

King told reporters after he met both sides that mediation officer Gus Leonidas has been assigned to assist the parties.

He said there had been no collective bargaining in B.C. to this point "and this is what we are getting under way now."

He said negotiations had been on a national basis because it was a national agreement involved.

These talks were conducted in Ontario and until it "became apparent that Ontario was unable to come up with an agreement that would be instituted in all the other provinces, it was virtually impossible for the other provinces to intervene."

Neil said journeymen installers will get an interim 61-cent pay increase, to $7.12 an hour, but other conditions are unchanged pending mediation.

B.C. courts held that the strike was illegal because the union never attempted to bargain a contract within B.C. If the union had bargained locally and reached an impasse, then the strike would have been legal.

'Mad Hatter' Idea Blasted

A plan to build a $5 million convention centre complex opposite the Legislative Buildings was described today as a "Mad Hatter's tea party" by Mayor Peter Pollen.

The proposed complex would include hotel rooms, an auditorium for 2,200 people, an art gallery, and satellite facilities, according to one of the businessmen behind the plan Dr. Harne Lane, president of Royal London Wax Museum.

The new centre would occupy the present site of the wax museum at 470 Belleville Street. The property is owned by Marathon Realty, Vancouver, a subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Lane was unwilling to discuss the centre, the people involved or the height of the proposed building, but said "we will be going underground for parking."

He said two companies are involved in the plan. Financing will come "basically from Victoria, although there is potential for outside money."

Lane said his group has not yet placed a proposal before city council but had approached aldermen "informally."

Pollen said he had heard of the plan and considers a convention centre in front of the legislature "the height of lunacy."

He compared the plan to the Mad Hatter's tea party and said those involved should "get the top off the teapot and come before city council with a decent proposal."

Health Permits Mailed to Cafes

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer today said that permits now required by eating places under changes in the Health Act have been put in the mail to most of them.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said some of the establishments will have received interim permits, giving them time to meet more stringent public health standards.

Others have not been dealt with yet but there is no need for operators without a permit to become alarmed. Their situation will be evaluated in due course, he said.

The new regulations became effective April 1 and under them, all 378 public eating places between Port Renfrew and the Gulf Islands require a permit signed by Whitbread.

The permit depends on operators meeting public health requirements spelled out in more detail in the new regulations.

Requirements relating to washrooms and dish-washing equipment are expected to force some of the smaller operations out of business eventually.

Propane Trial Urged For Four City Vehicles

Victoria city council's public works committee recommended today that council put four of its service vehicles on a 90-day trial using propane gas.

Bill Price, of Cigas Products Ltd., said the trial would cost the city nothing but the price of the fuel used.

A reduction in provincial taxes introduced by the NDP government comes into effect next month, putting the highest cost of propane per gallon at 24.5 cents plus 10 cents tax. Bulk purchases would reduce the cost to some extent.

Price told a council committee propane gave better mileage than vehicles with the increasingly inefficient emission control equipment needed for regular gasoline.

He said further reductions in the efficiency of normal gas engines would come with U.S. 1975 emission standards. He said the purchaser of a car in that year would pay $700 for emission control equipment.

Propane, produced in B.C., used as a fuel reduces emission of pollutants by up to 70 per cent, Price said.

Engines wear better, maintenance costs are lower and mileage improves, he said, although the fuel is not yet being pushed for private car owners because propane stations, of which there are few, do not have proper measuring equipment.

Under the deal being recommended to the city, Cigas will set up a fueling station in the public works yard. Trucks will be fitted with propane pressure tanks which have a valve that closes automatically in case of rupture of the fuel line.

Price said he had never heard of a fire or explosion occurring in an accident involving a propane-powered vehicle.

The city has 200 vehicles. Some major haulers in Vancouver, among them Johnson Terminals Ltd., have recently introduced fleets of propane-powered trucks.

HAPPY HOOKER GETS WELCOME

The Happy Hooker is welcome to take her place on Greater Victoria bookstore shelves, according to police in Saanich, Oak Bay and Victoria.

The controversial biography of reformed prostitute Xavier Hollander, currently facing police action in Toronto, has not been the source of any complaints in this area, says Victoria's Chief J. F. Gregory.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald was asked in the legislature Monday to check allegations that Victoria police were removing the book from local stores.

A Saanich spokesman said he hadn't heard of any complaints, but assumed "it must be a good book" if there was a question raised about it in the legislature.

Oak Bay police chief John Green said there have been no complaints.

"The book stores here don't carry the book," he added.

Man Remanded On Murder Count

Victoria's first capital murder charge in five years was read in provincial court today against a 42-year-old Victoria man charged in a March 14 stabbing death.

Roydon Gaylord Morrison, 132 Dallas, was originally charged with the non-capital murder of Wallace Omar Stevenson, 51, a fellow resident at the Dallas Road boarding house for alcoholics.

A preliminary hearing into the non-capital murder charge has already been set for June 11, 12 and 13. The charge was remanded to April 10 to fix a day for a hearing.

The last capital murder charge in Victoria was laid five years ago, against Orlando Trozzo, in the shooting of another man. Trozzo was later given seven years on a reduced charge.

The last execution in British Columbia was 12 years ago. The last in Canada took place in Ontario in 1961.

Six years later, Ottawa suspended the death penalty for all but the killings of police officers and prison guards. That five-year experimental suspension ended this year and so far has not been replaced by new legislation.

Pre-Booking Plan For Golf Course

A new way to ration time at municipally-owned Cedar Hill golf course is being considered by the course management committee to relieve congestion.

Saanich alderman William Noel, a member of the management committee, said a system of pre-booking all golfing time will be discussed at the committee's next meeting later this month.

The Saanich course, purchased as part of the McRae estate for $1.2 million in 1967, is the only publicly-owned golf course on Vancouver Island and is heavily patronized by golfers who are not members of private clubs.

Three types of player use the course: members of Cedar Hill Golf Club, season pass holders, and random golfers.

Noel estimates a 15 per cent increase in course usage this year. There are too many club members for a small course, he said.

Although 18 holes long, Cedar Hill is shorter and has a lower par than many courses.

Mrs. Florence Genn, secretary of Cedar Hill Golf Club, said some members have quit because they've had to wait an hour or more to tee off.

She said if Cedar Hill is to be a public course fewer season passes should be sold and club membership reduced to make more time available for "green fee players," or the public at large dropping by for a game at random.

The club limits membership to 450 men, 125 women and 50 juniors. There are now 410, 121 and 50.

The pre-booking system is used currently only for weekend golf when demand is heaviest.

And Now a Starveathon

After an endless stream of walkathons, bikeathons and wakeathons a Canadian Christian organization has come up with a new idea for Easter — a starveathon.

World Vision of Canada, an interdenominational missionary organization, is planning a 40-hour famine to raise money for the earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

Estimating that 17,200 people die every 40 hours of unidentified causes, largely attributed to malnutrition, the organization hopes to enlist 10,000 people across Canada to each raise $17.20 for the cause.

That would require each participant to be sponsored for 43 cents an hour and would mean raising a total of $172,000.

The famine is scheduled from 8 p.m. April 19 to noon April 21.

In Victoria, Emmanuel Baptist Church is sponsoring the famine. An organizational meeting with representatives of World Vision is planned for April 5.

Spokesmen say they hope participants will be together during the famine, but some people will have to fast at home.

World Vision is an international organization which began in the U.S. after the Second World War.

Fairfield Residents Alerted Against Repair Swindlers

Better Business Bureau director Bill Tindall suspects there is a ring of swindlers in the city operating a home repairs racket.

The ring was operating in the Fairfield area Monday, said Tindall, knocking on people's doors and offering to make repairs on their chimneys, roofs and gutters.

One woman was told her chimney was in a really dangerous condition and could be repaired for $240, he said.

"This was sheer nonsense," said Tindall.

The ring is probably people from the Mainland, said Tindall, but someone is supplying them with lists of prospective "customers", people who have had home repairs in the last year or so.

He suspects that a few people in the home repair business locally are selling their lists of customers to other people in the business, and getting a kickback on deals made.

One elderly man paid $1,200 for home repairs this year to one of these shady operators, said Tindall. An appraisal later by a reputable firm showed the repairs amounted to $150.

The swindlers often paint a "disaster situation", he said, telling the prospective customer that his roof or gutters must be fixed immediately.

Anyone approached on a direct basis for home repairs should demand to see the man's trades licence, should get a contract stating a fixed price and itemizing the work to be done, and should refuse to pay in advance, said Tindall.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

At some time or other, the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. We are more grateful than mere words can express to all of you who did so much to help us through this time. We would like to thank all who sent cards, letters and donated to the Heart Fund. A special thank you to Dr. Portelance and the nurses at the Jubilee Hospital for their untiring care. Also Archdeacon Jones and Rev. Titus for their beautiful service and comforting words.

—Mrs. T. Milburn; Son, Bruce; Daughter-in-law, Pam; Grandsons, Rick, Don and Kim.

9 IN MEMORIAM

FRY—In loving memory of dear Donna, who passed away April 3, 1972.

They say that time will ease the pain,
And help me to forget.
But time so far has only shown
How much I miss you yet.
I miss your smile, your voice, your talk;
The things we used to do.
I miss the happy times we had,
But mostly I miss you.

—Ever remembered by Grandma Davison and Uncle Ken.

HALL—In loving memory of our dear mother and Gran, Mrs. Ada Hall. Passed away April 4, 1971.

In my heart your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true;
There's not a day dear mother and Gran,
I do not think of you.

—Dorine, Beverley and Dick.

HULL—In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away April 3, 1971.

Not dead to me who loved him,
Not lost but gone before.
He lives with me in memory,
And will forever more.

—Lovingly remembered by his wife Christie Hull.

NELSON—In memory of Philip, beloved husband and father, who passed away April 3, 1970.

—Sadly missed and quietly remembered by his loving wife and family.

BREAKFAST ODDITIES

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fancy some fried Chinese food for breakfast?

Or, alternatively, a bottle of Coke, some chicken pizza and a chunk of steak . . . with a blob of chocolate ice cream to finish off.

Those are just some of the oddities British Columbia children eat for breakfast.

Ed Nelson (NDP — Burnaby-Seymour) conducted a survey in two schools in his riding to find out what children eat for breakfast.

Nelson found that socio-economic factors had little to do with the quality of breakfasts.

One school had a high population of lower income students, the other was in an upper income area. Basically, most children ate commercial cereals and milk for breakfast.

Some, however, said that during a period of one week they had eaten fried Chinese food, steak, chocolate ice cream and chicken pizza and cake.

The odd child ate nothing — or ate nothing at all except "a glass of water."

Eggs and bacon, waffles, fruit juice, flavored drinks and coffee were other popular meals.

Heaviest U.S. Raids Pound Cambodia

Times News Service

SAIGON — U.S. planes, including every available B-52 bomber in Southeast Asia, gave Communist forces in Cambodia their heavviest pounding of the war during the night as part of the U.S. campaign to force them into a ceasefire, reliable sources reported today.

The sources compared the bombing to the attacks on Hanoi and Haiphong last December that were aimed at forcing North Vietnam into a peace settlement.

But the Communists in Cambodia are widely dispersed and have none of the industrial concentrations vulnerable to air attack that the North Vietnamese had.

The sources said they were unable to say just how many strikes U.S. pilots flew or how many tons of bombs they dropped.

But they indicated about 120 B-52s were used in the attack, and that could mean a total of 3,600 tons of bombs dropped.

Military sources said some of the big bombers, along with F-111 fighter-bombers, supported Cambodian government troops advancing into the Kirirom plateau 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

The government troops are reported to have reached the plateau and found a deserted base camp of the Khmer Rouge.

But other government forces south of Phnom Penh continued to retreat and abandoned the garrison town of Chambak, 30 miles south of the capital.

In South Vietnam, the Saigon government continued to complain about the six-week-old Communist siege of the Tong Le Chan ranger camp 50 miles north of Saigon.

Meanwhile, President Nixon, winding up two days of talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu, appeared today to be backing away from a public military guarantee for South Vietnam despite his readiness to act against any new invasion by the North.

His remarks indicated he might decide to give a private commitment to President Thieu and publicly rest on his recent warnings of reprisals if Hanoi blatantly violates the ceasefire.

In Washington U.S. Defence Secretary Elliot Richardson repeated today if North Vietnam flagrantly violates the Indochina ceasefire, the United States might have to resume bombing in support of South Vietnamese troops.

Nixon needs no new authority from congress for such action, he added.

Richardson said he was confident South Vietnam would be able to provide for its own security in the near future, even if North Vietnam engages in a massive invasion.

But he said if violations of the truce continue and "if it were critical to the survival of South Vietnam," the United States might be forced into "the re-introduction of U.S. forces."

Meat Sales Off

Times News Services

Consumers appear to be biting into the week-long meat boycott with determination, throwing off meat sales by as much as 80 per cent in scores of supermarkets in the United States and in some parts of Canada and slicing some prices 29 cents a pound.

Mrs. Margaret Addis, leading the boycott in Victoria, said today she believes her group's plea is gaining support.

She increased to 2,000, her estimate of the number of area consumers who signed a petition supporting the boycott.

Consumer groups are urging that cottage cheese, fish, chicken and eggs be substituted for beef and fish retailers say the boycott is affecting sales.

Mrs. Janet Tubman, of Fisherman's Market on the Island Highway, reports sales went "way up" on the weekend, Monday and this morning.

"I've asked a few women, about 10 or so, if it's because of the meat boycott and they say yes," she said.

BUYING FISH

"They've been buying enough fish to last the whole week."

"It's like my meat had some disease; nobody'll even touch it," complained a meat manager in the New York City area, where a check of supermarkets showed the boycott to be about 80 per cent effective on the first shopping day Monday

Siouxland Beef Processors closed their plants temporarily in Fargo, N.D., Omaha, Neb., and Sioux City, Iowa. They said they wanted to determine what effect the boycott would have.

Standard Beef Inc. of Detroit, which normally processes 150 to 200 cattle a day, was handling only 100 to 125. Meat packers across Michigan reported orders down 25 per cent.

About 500 butchers were laid off by Cincinnati packing houses. In Cleveland, about 200 meat cutters were out of work Monday.

In Washington, Safeway Stores laid off 50 of its 300 meat cutters. Giant Food stores laid off part-time meat cutters and transferred a number of regular butchers to other departments of the supermarket.

About price declines, Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, minimized the impact.

"I don't think the boycott activity of these activities amounts to a mammary gland on a mudworm," Adamy said. Meat demand started dropping six weeks ago, he said, as consumers began resisting higher prices.

The boycott has led to herds

Operation Nasty Deal Nasty Deal for Hans

Hans Gajowski

Hans Gajowski was quietly doing his job Monday afternoon when he was arrested and held at gunpoint for nearly two hours by uniformed Canadian military personnel.

He and his partner Joe Macerias ran afoul of an exercise named Nasty Deal, designed to train servicemen to combat civil strife.

Gajowski and Macerias work for Chew Excavating Ltd. and were doing a routine check of a pumping station at CFB Esquimalt. They had been admitted to the base without passes since their work truck was all the identification they needed.

When they put down their tools for a coffee break at 2 p.m. and returned to their truck, they were approached by "six or eight people fully dressed in military uniform."

At first the military men said it was "okay" that the workmen didn't have any identification passes.

"But when we finished our break and came out (of the truck), a big man with a gun jumped out," Gajowski said. "He said stop and put your hands in the air."

The two workmen were marched at gunpoint up to a large training hall where they were forced to stand with their hands against the wall and told not to move or talk.

"The rifles were always pointed at us," Gajowski said.

"And one man said 'watch out for weapons' — we both heard him."

Gajowski said they had to stand against the wall for about 15 minutes.

"I don't know what they were doing. I told them I wanted to talk to a navy MP (military policeman) who would know who we were," Gajowski said, "but they wouldn't let us."

The two workmen were then marched, again at gunpoint and surrounded by the uniformed guards, to the main gate where the commissionaire told them the MPs were at another gate.

The march then continued down to the other gate where the two men were held outside a building.

"The men went inside and talked to the MP while we waited," Gajowski said. "Then they took off and we were allowed to see the MP and he phoned Chew Excavating."

The company confirmed who the men were and the MP issued them each a special pass and allowed them to leave.

John Heine is a young cartoonist who is quickly gaining recognition for the individuality of his work. Two of his distinctive drawings, under the name "Maya", are in the Times on Page Five today and will be seen frequently in the future.

Maya is the Sanskrit word for illusion. Heine says he chose it because "it leaves my cartoon panel open for an infinity of ideas and keeps it from being clouded."

Amplifying in his own way on what he is trying to do, Heine sets his goal as, "to break through the cartoon bubble that has restricted thoughts for many years and expand it into a whole new bubble."

Second U.K. Mail Bombing

LONDON (Reuter) — A mail bomb exploded in a London post office today, the second such blast in four days in the city.

One man was taken to a hospital suffering from shock after the blast in a sorting office in West London.

A mail bomb damaged a room at a sorting office in Kilburn in North London last Saturday.

Britain's domestic news agency, the Press Association, said a man phoned a newspaper in Belfast claiming to represent an Irish republican group called "The Avengers," saying they were responsible for the two bombings.

Meanwhile, terrorists struck in Northern Ireland during the night, shooting one man dead and devastating the heart of a small country town with a powerful bomb.

In the neighboring Irish republic, teams of navy frogmen waited for the weather to clear before resuming an underwater search for the secrets of a ship said to have been running arms for the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The body of a man, about 25, was found early today sprawled in a ditch at the side of a road. Police said he had been shot in the head from close range.

Late Monday night 100 pounds of gelignite exploded in Dungiven, County Londonderry.

It caused widespread damage in the main street and wounded three girls who were hit by fragments of glass.

B.C. Gets Can-Cel For Debts

By BRIAN BUTTERS

Times Staff

The provincial government announced Monday it has established itself in the pulp industry, through acquisition of controlling interest in the operations of Columbia Cellulose Ltd., a major pulp-producing concern in the province.

The agreement was made public in the legislature by Resources Minister Bob Williams.

Seventy nine per cent of the assets of Canadian Cellulose — the principal operating subsidiary of Colcel — will go to the province in exchange for the province guaranteeing long-term debts amounting to about $70.5 million which are owed by Canadian Cellulose to bondholders, banks and investors.

The agreement was concluded primarily between the provincial government and the Celanese Corporation, the American parent firm of Columbia Cellulose.

As part of the agreement, a debt of $73 million, which was owed by Canadian Cellulose to the Celanese Corporation, will be written off.

Williams said the release of the debt to the parent company will put Canadian Cellulose in a better economic position.

The government's interest in Canadian Cellulose will be managed by a proposed new crown corporation to be called British Columbia Cellulose Limited.

Legislation creating the corporation and authorizing the government to enter into the agreement will be passed by the legislature this spring, Williams said.

The legislation has not yet been introduced.

Columbia Cellulose is reported to have lost about $100 million in its B.C. operations since 1966.

The parent company — Celanese — has been interested in selling out since 1968.

As part of the agreement, the government will assume control through its 79 per cent interest in all the pulp-producing operations of Columbia Cellulose in B.C.

These include the profitable operations located in the Castlegar area, known as Celgar.

It had been the intention of Columbia Cellulose to sell its Celgar operations to the giant American Weyerhaeuser Corporation last year. But the sale was blocked by Williams

NEWS BRIEFS

$5M to Politics

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's major companies donated nearly $5 million to political parties in 1970, and $1.4 million of this came from foreign-owned firms. The information was given to New Democratic Leader David Lewis in reply to a written Commons question.

Libel Suit Dropped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett has dropped his libel and slander suit against Social Credit leader W. A. C. Bennett, it was announced Monday. The premier took the action before the Aug. 30, 1972, provincial election for remarks attributed to Bennett, who was then premier, linking Barrett with a violent demonstration against the cabinet.

Resignation Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican member of the Senate Watergate investigating committee today called for the resignation of the White House chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman. Senator Lowell Weicker said he personally believes Haldeman knew both the men and policies behind the wiretapping at the Watergate. (Earlier story on Page 6.)

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's 276,000 miners have voted against strike action, it was announced today. Sixty-three per cent of the votes cvast opposed strike action, official figures showed.

BANKS SPECULATED DURING $ CRISIS

WASHINGTON (WP) — American commercial banks were "significant participants" in the "sizeable outflows of funds from the U.S." during the intense speculation on the dollar which led to its Feb. 12 devaluation, U.S. federal reserve board governor Andrew Brimmer said Monday.

Brimmer, in a speech to the Bankers' Association for Foreign Trade in Boca Raton, Fla., said that there is not enough detailed information to "appraise the part they played," but said available data persuades "one that their participation was by no means trivial."

Intense speculation against the dollar in late January and early February led to a 10 per cent dollar devaluation on Feb. 12. Despite the devaluation, speculation continued and by last month most of the major world economic powers floated their currencies.

Brimmer, whose text was released here, said that U.S. banks "contributed on balance some $2.5 billion to the volume of funds which moved abroad in connection with the exchange rate speculation earlier this year."

Snow, Thunder Wallop South

Times News Services

Heavy snows and severe thunderstorms walloped much of the southwestern United States today from Arizona to Texas and north into Colorado.

Denver was hit by two inches of snow from a storm system that had already dumped up to 17 inches of snow on the Albuquerque, N.M., area. Heavy snow warnings remained in effect for the mountains of New Mexico and extreme southeastern Colorado.

Efforts to drop hay to stranded cattle in Colorado from helicopters were temporarily abandoned. A spokesman for the Colorado agriculture department estimated that 15,000 calves may be lost in this severe weather.

In Europe trees flew through the air, homes collapsed, mudslides cut communications in Sicily and at least nine people have died on the continent victims of the weather.

Gale force winds hit the south of England. A tree in Boesensell, West Germany, was uprooted by a storm and tossed into a passing commuter train.

A storm raged through The Netherlands, carrying winds of 70 miles an hour. One man was killed when a wall toppled over on him. Dozens of people were reported injured when their cars were blown off the road.

A radio station operating from a ship off the Dutch coast, Radio Veronica, broke its moorings in the storm and washed ashore. The crew escaped in a lifeboat.

In the Soviet Union, the Tass news agency reported an earthquake in central Asia rocked the town of Kulyab. The agency said there was no damage.

Ocean Falls Humming

Ocean Falls, the newly-acquired government mill town in northern B.C., is making paper ahead of schedule and drawing back many former employees.

Production was due to start in May but officials decided to keep one of the paper machines going following the former owner's official departure at the end of March.

A bill setting out the government acquisition procedure was introduced in the legislature Monday. (See Page 3.)

Ted Vesak, the appointed manager, explained in an interview today that most employee needs are being met.

Of former employees, 90 are staying on. Another 32 who left after Crown Zellerbach announced its pull-out last April have applied to return. And another 43 former employees have also applied. Beyond that there are 200 applications from people elsewhere in the province.

There are also 20 student workers employed.

"We are much farther along than anybody ever hoped for," Vesak said.

He added, however, that some senior paper makers, welders and pipefitters will be required to complete employee requirements.

The whole town is run through its one industry and to keep non-mill operations functioning, it was necessary to keep the steam plant running. Therefore it was decided to keep one of the paper machines running, Vesak said.

He anticipates that one of the newsprint machines will begin operating in May, and the other sometime following that. The company has orders for the paper in B.C. and is receiving raw materials.

The town's hospital and hotel are operating, Pacific Western Airlines and Northland Navigation are supplying the town, and other services are running normally, Vesak said.

HEAL WOUNDS URGES PoW

By MURREY MARDER

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The senior U.S. civilian prisoner-of-war, who spent 4½ years in solitary confinement, called Monday for compassionate aid to "heal the wounds" of both sides in Vietnam.

Philip Manhard, 51, and a veteran diplomat, told a state department news conference he experienced some of the same mistreatment and torture now being described by fellow PoWs.

But while the tales of ordeals have stimulated new opposition to post-war aid for North Vietnam, Manhard urged the opposite course.

"I was mistreated, I was tortured — but only once for about 15 hours" when he was trussed over a cross-beam to force him to talk, he said.

Manhard said he also suffered a serious digestive problem for three years from inadequate nourishment.

Nevertheless, speaking as a citizen and not "a bureaucrat," Manhard said, "our best interests lie in trying to do what we reasonably can to establish a period of what I call genuine, stable, peaceful co-existence" in Vietnam.

The "Vietnamese people in general," he said, "have suffered a great deal — from everybody."

America's traditional "generosity and forgiveness," Manhard said, "should go beyond ideological boundaries and the hardships of the past" to help repair "the tremendous amount of damage" on both sides of the struggle.

Manhard, on his first trip to the state department from Bethesda Naval Hospital where he is still under treatment, said he is too much out of touch with events to speak of sums of money or types of aid.
